

11 525

· E 2

0 021 547 780 0

Hollinger Corp.
pH 8.5

A War Catechism

Questions and Answers Concerning the

Great World War

By W. W. EARNEST
Superintendent of Schools
CHAMPAIGN, ILL.

A WAR CATECHISM

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS CONCERNING THE GREAT WORLD WAR, ITS CAUSES AND PROGRESS; OUR COUNTRY'S PART IN IT; OUR DUTIES AS CITIZENS,—BY W. W. EARNEST, SUPERINTENDENT OF SCHOOLS, CHAMPAIGN, ILLINOIS.

Price of single copy without cover, 10c; with stiff paper cover. 15c; in larger numbers, 8c and 10c respectively.

Notes: The following arrangement in the form of a catechism of the main facts necessary to an understanding of the war situation, was made for the convenience of teachers of all grades, high school and elementary, in selecting material to present to their pupils. The compiler wishes to acknowledge indebtedness to Dr. Laurence M. Larson, Professor of History in the University of Illinois, for a critical reading and suggestions which have very much reduced the probability of material error in any statement of fact and have led to some valuable additions; and also to Mr. Douglas C. Ridgely, Professor of Geography in the Illinois State Normal University, for a similar favor in connection with a later edition.

When used in classes, an attempt to have pupils commit to memory all answers is not recommended, but rather a free reading from beginning to end, with such discussions as may naturally arise, followed by a review in which the teacher may designate for memorizing such parts as seem to him especially valuable.

COUNTRIES TAKING PART IN THE WAR

When did the United States enter the greatest of all wars?
April 6, 1917.

When had this war begun?
Near the first of August, 1914.

How many countries have taken part?
Twenty-nine, twenty-five on our side and four on the other.

What are the four enemy countries?
The United States has declared war against Germany and Austria-Hungary; and Bulgaria and Turkey are helping these countries.

What twenty-five countries are or have been at war against the four or against some of the four?
Belgium, Serbia, France, Great Britain, Montenegro, Italy, Greece, Brazil, Japan, China, Cuba, Portugal, Liberia, Panama, San Marino, Siam, Roumania, Russia, the United States, Nicaragua, Uruguay (?), Guatemala, Costa Rica, Honduras, Haiti. The status of Uruguay is doubtful.

Which of these are defeated and have made peace?
Russia and Roumania; also, Bulgaria, Sept. 30, 1918.

What countries have lost all or nearly all of their territory but are continuing the fight?
Belgium, Serbia and Montenegro.

Which ones are very small in war power?
Cuba, Liberia, Panama, San Marino, Uruguay, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Honduras, Guatemala, Haiti.

Which others have taken only small part in the fighting?
Greece, Brazil, China, Siam and Japan. Portugal has helped in Africa and in France. The United States has prepared greatly, helped at sea, placed large forces in France and is now taking an important part in the fighting.

On which four does the great burden of the war now seem to rest?
On Italy, France, Great Britain and the United States.

Are there any other countries not friendly toward Germany and her allies?
Yes; four other countries have ceased friendly relations, though they have not declared war.

Which are these four countries?

Peru, Ecuador, Bolivia and Egypt.

What name may appropriately be given to this war?

The War of the Nations or The Great World War.

What parts of the world are neutral in this war; that is, do not take either side?

Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Switzerland, Spain, Mexico and a few other countries of small power in Asia and in Latin America.

What good reason is there why some of these should keep out of the war?

They are so situated that they would be exposed to quick defeat and destruction from one side or the other if they took either side.

BEGINNING OF THE WAR

Between what two countries did the dispute leading to this present war arise?

Between Serbia and Austria.

What is Serbia?

A small country in southeastern Europe, subject for more than 400 years to Turkey but independent since 1878.

Was it always of small power?

No; for a short time long ago it was very powerful, and it has never forgotten it.

To what race do the Serbians belong?

To the Slavic race.

What are the four largest race divisions of the peoples of Europe?

Graeco-Latin, Celtic, Germanic and Slavic.

What region do the Greeks and Latins inhabit?

The southern and southwestern parts of Europe.

In what countries are they chiefly?

In Greece, Italy, Spain, Portugal, Roumania, the eastern part of Hungary, France and southern Belgium.

What peoples are Celtic?

The Welsh, Highland Scotch, Irish and Northwestern French.

What countries are chiefly Germanic?

England, Southern Scotland, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, part of Belgium, Germany and Austria.

What countries are chiefly Slavic?

Russia, Serbia, Bulgaria, Poland and parts of Austria-Hungary.

What is Austria-Hungary?

A large central European country north of Serbia.

What is it often called?

The dual monarchy; that is, the double monarchy.

Why is it so called?

Because it is made up of two separate parts, the Austrian empire and the kingdom of Hungary.

Are there two governments?

Yes; with their capitals at Vienna and Budapest.

How are these two governments joined?

The same man is the emperor of Austria and the king of Hungary, and Austria-Hungary acts as a unit in foreign relations.

Of what races are the peoples of Austria?

The most powerful race is German; but most of the people, Poles, Ruthenians, Slovenes, Dalmatians and Bohemians or Czechs, are Slavs; many Italians also live in Trieste, Trent and the adjoining regions.

Of what races are the peoples of Hungary?

The Croatians, the Slovaks, and some others are Slavic; the Transylvanians are Roumanians; but the ruling class, the Magyars, or Hungarians, are descended from an Asiatic race not belonging to any one of the four chief divisions named.

What languages do these people speak?

Several different ones,—German, Magyar, Croatian, Roumanian, etc.

What is Bosnia?

A province next to Serbia, which Serbia had desired but Austria-Hungary took some years ago, in 1908.

Why had the Serbians thought they should have Bosnia?

Because the Bosnians are Serbs of their own race.

What does Pan-Slavism mean?

The idea that all the peoples of Slavic race should be united.

Did the Serbians want Pan-Slavism to succeed?

Yes; it is quite certain that they desired this strongly.

What brought on the particular quarrel between Austria and Serbia in 1914?

The assassination on June 28 of that year of Archduke Francis Ferdinand of Austria, with his wife.

Who was Francis Ferdinand?

He was the heir to the throne of the dual monarchy.

Where was he murdered?

In the streets of the chief city of Bosnia, where he was visiting as a sort of compliment to the people.

Who killed him?

Bosnians who were Austrian subjects of Slavic race.

What claim did Austria make?

That a society had plotted and prepared for this crime in Serbia.

How long was it before much was done concerning this matter?

It was July 23 before any definite action was taken by Austria.

What was then done?

Austria sent Serbia ten demands, with a haughty message requiring an answer within forty-eight hours.

Was Serbia given much choice as to what should be done?

No; Austria practically gave an order as to what must be done.

What is such a "last word" between nations called?

An ultimatum.

What were the chief demands of the Austrian ultimatum?

That the plotters against Austria be found and punished and such activities stopped.

What privilege in the investigation was demanded?

That Austria be permitted to send agents into Serbia to conduct the investigation.

What did Serbia do?

She agreed to eight demands, promising to do all she could to find the plotters and to suppress their activities, and partially accepted another.

Which demand did she refuse?

To allow Austrian agents to come into Serbia to manage the investigation; though promising to inform such agents of the results.

Why was this one demand refused?

Serbia could not claim to be an independent government, if another country controlled her courts.

What else did Serbia offer to do?

To leave the whole matter to the Hague Peace Court.

What is this Peace Court?

A court which most of the countries of the world agreed to establish to settle disputes between or among nations willing to use it.

Where was this court to be held?

At the Hague, the capital of the Netherlands.

Did Austria agree to Serbia's proposal?

No; the Austrian minister left Serbia as soon as he read Serbia's offer.

What did this mean?

That Austria meant to attack Serbia.

Could Austria conquer Serbia?

Yes, as easily as a large man could hurt a little child.

What shows that Austria was looking for an excuse to quarrel?

She had asked Italy a year before to join with her in a war on Serbia.

A small child sometimes has friends that may be called upon. Did Serbia have any such?

Yes; especially Russia, the great Slavic nation.

What was Russia then?

A very large and apparently powerful country occupying more than half of Europe and more than one-third of Asia.

What form of government did Russia have?

A monarchy under an emperor called the Czar.

How many languages are spoken in that great country?

About one hundred, it is said.

What are some of the different peoples of the country?

Russians, Poles, Lithuanians, Finns, Lapps, Tartars, Jews, and many others.

What did Great Britain, or England, propose to Germany?

That all the disputes of Austria and Serbia be referred to a conference of Italy, France, Germany and England.

Did Germany favor this?

No.

Why was Germany asked to help?

Because she was understood to have especial influence with Austria.

What is Germany, or, more exactly, the German empire?

An empire of twenty-five states, large and small, with the province of Alsace-Lorraine, lying north of Austria and west of Russia.

What kind of governments do these states have?

Four are kingdoms; six, grand duchies; five, duchies; seven, principalities; three, free cities; and Alsace-Lorraine, an imperial territory.

Which is the great one of the German states?

Prussia, which is considerably larger than all the others together.

What is England?

It is the principal part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, northwest of the continent of Europe.

What is the British empire?

The United Kingdom as a center, together with many connected countries in different parts of the world.

What are some of the other large parts of the British empire?

Canada, India, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, etc.

Have all of these dominions co-operated with Great Britain in this war?

Yes, heartily and of their own accord.

For instance, who are the Anzacs?

Soldiers of the Australian-New Zealand Army Corps. Note the initials.

What had both Serbia and Austria begun to do before the end of July, 1914?

To mobilize their armies.

What does mobilization mean?

Gathering armies together, calling men into camps, equipping them so as to be ready to move.

When did Austria declare war on Serbia?

July 28, 1914.

When Austria was thus threatening to overwhelm Serbia, what did Serbia's great friend do?

Russia began also to mobilize.

What did Germany do?

She demanded that Russia cease mobilizing within twelve hours.

What was Germany doing at the same time?

It is believed that she was quietly mobilizing her own armies.

EUROPEAN ALLIANCES.

What was the Triple Alliance?

A league among the countries of Germany, Austria and Italy.

What agreement had they made?

That any one of them would help another, if attacked by an outside power. This alliance was made in 1882.

Had these countries always been friendly?

No; only about fifteen years earlier Germany had conquered Austria-Hungary in a war and Italy had taken large provinces from her.

Why, then, were they leagued together?

For fear of need of defense from other nations, especially France and Russia.

What was the Dual Alliance?

A league formed between Russia and France in 1893.

What is France?

A large republic lying west of Germany and Italy, across the English Channel, southeast of England.

Did Russia cease mobilizing on Germany's demand?

No; both Russia and France continued to mobilize their armies.

Did England have an alliance like those of the countries named in the Triple and the Dual Alliances?

No, not a close alliance of the same kind; though she had a quite friendly understanding with France in 1904 and with Russia in 1907 known then as the Triple Entente.

Why did she not seek such a close alliance?

She was not in so much fear of her neighbors.

MILITARY PREPARATIONS.

Which of the two great nations were the least friendly?

Germany and France.

Why?

Chiefly because Germany had defeated France in a war in 1871.

What did Germany do to France then?

She took from France valuable land and much money.

What land?

The provinces of Alsace and Lorraine lying west of the Rhine. These were held subject to the new German Empire then formed but not made a member of the federation.

How much money?

Over a billion dollars, then considered a very great sum.

What had been expected ever since?

That France would some day seek revenge and the recovery of her provinces.

What had Germany done ever since?

She had kept up a very large army.

How greatly was the army esteemed?

Some one said long ago that other countries possessed armies, but that in Prussia the army possessed the country.

Who chiefly built up this army?

The Hohenzollern princes, electors of Brandenburg, then kings of Prussia, and finally emperors of the new German empire, who taught their sons and people to put their chief confidence in the army.

How was this army made ready?

By training in arms all young men for from one to three years.

What did this compel other countries to do?

To keep up very large armies also.

Which countries especially kept large armies?

France, Russia, Austria and Italy.

How was Germany's army regarded?

As the best and strongest of all.

How great were these armies of Europe?

Russia had about six million trained men; Austria-Hungary, Germany, and France a little more or less than four millions each; while Great Britain had less than one million, and the United States 212,000.

How were these armies equipped?

With great stores of guns, ammunition, clothing, food, tents, wagons, trucks, everything with which to live and fight.

What other provisions for war were made?

Many army camps were built, very strong forts were placed along the boundaries and great navies were constructed.

Was this military establishment expensive?

Very expensive. All of these things had to be paid for, they were used up without bringing anything in return, and the soldiers were not producing anything on farms, in factories, etc., as they might have done.

What are some examples of this expense?

The largest guns cost more than $100,000 each, a dreadnaught costs $15,000,000. It costs $1000 to fire a large gun once.

What were the Krupp works?

The greatest factories in the world for the manufacture of guns and other munitions of war, situated at Essen in Germany.

Is war itself still more expensive than the preparation?

Yes; almost beyond comparison.

What national debt did the United States owe before entering this war?

About one billion dollars.

What, in billions of dollars, were the national debts of some nations in July, 1918?

Great Britain, 28; Germany, 26; France, 22; Austria-Hungary, 19; the United States, 12; Italy, 7.

In simplest terms, what is the business of war?

To kill and frighten the enemy until the survivors are willing to submit to the demands of the conqueror.

GERMAN VIEW OF WAR AND RIGHTS OF OTHERS.

What was the German view of war?

One of their writers said, "War is a holy thing, the holiest thing on earth. War is the noblest and holiest expression of human activity."

Why, as they said, were Germany and the other great countries keeping these great armies?

They said it was their purpose to keep the peace by making others hesitate to attack them.

If all the men in your neighborhood carried loaded revolvers and rifles every day would that be the best way to keep the peace?

Every one can see that it would not be.

Was it different with the nations of Europe?

No; their great preparation has only made the great war more terrible. Peace can not be kept by general preparation to fight.

Was there a better way to keep the peace?

Yes; it could have been done by all agreeing not to arm.

How then could disputes be settled?

By referring them to a court like that of the Hague to decide what is right.

Why have not all countries agreed to do something of this kind?

Because, it seems, some of them have determined to have their own way, whether others think it right or not.

Which country seems to have been most determined to have its own way?

Germany.

Have Germans ever said so?

Yes; many of their writers have said that a growing aspiring nation can not afford to be hampered by arbitration agreements.

What made war attractive to Germany in 1914?

The prospect of relief from the expenses of their armaments by putting them on conquered nations, as in 1871.

Do they not think weaker countries have the same rights as themselves?

No; they think that Germans are the wisest people on earth and that it would be a good thing for most other peoples to have Germans rule them.

What reasons for such an opinion do they give?

They say that Germans have done more than any other people in science, in art, in music, in literature, in fine business management of every kind and so are the only people who know enough to manage other peoples.

What did they consider the business of the Germans to be in the world?

William I said, "God has called us to civilize the world; we are the missionaries of human progress."

What was taught in the German schools as to this?

A prominent educator said in a speech, "The whole history of the world is neither more nor less than a preparation for the time when it shall please God to allow the affairs of the universe to be in German hands."

BRITISH AND AMERICAN PREPARATION.

Which great country did not have a great army?

England had a very small army compared with those of other countries.

Why did she not have as great an army as other nations had?

Largely because she relied on water for protection, being situated on an island.

What did she have to add to this protection?

Twice as large a navy as any other country in the world.

What other European countries had navies of considerable size?

Germany, France, Russia, Austria, Italy.

Did England train all her young men to be soldiers?

No; she had a good many soldiers scattered through the world, but depended on volunteers for this army.

Which other great country followed a similar plan?

The United States; as we had a very small army and a navy of considerable size, the third in the world.

Why did we feel safe?

We were protected by much more water than England.

Shall we have to maintain a large and well-trained army after this war?

Yes, if any other nation on earth be allowed to do so.

BELGIUM'S NEUTRALITY.

When it became plain that war would break out between Germany and France, what question did England ask both?

Whether they would now respect the neutrality of Belgium.

What was Belgium?

A small but very industrious and wealthy country northeast of France and west of Germany.

What is meant by saying that Belgium had been neutralized?

That the great countries about it had agreed with Belgium and with one another to keep Belgium out of war.

In what ways?

They agreed that Belgium should not go to war, should not be attacked or invaded by any of them and should be defended by them if attacked by others.

What countries had made such an agreement concerning Belgium?

Prussia, France, England, Austria and Russia, in 1839.

How was this agreement concluded?

By a formal and solemn treaty signed by the representatives of all the countries.

Was the new German empire bound by the treaty made by Prussia before 1871?

Yes; this empire has repeatedly acknowledged its obligation to such international agreements of the kingdom of Prussia.

What were the replies to England's questions?

France said she would respect the neutrality of Belgium, Germany would not say what she would do.

SPREAD OF THE WAR.

What did Germany do August 1, four days after Austria began war on Serbia?

She declared war on Russia.

What did Germany demand of Belgium August 2?

That Belgium allow German armies to cross Belgium into France.

What did she promise Belgium?

To pay for all supplies needed and make good any damage done.

What did Belgium reply?

That she wished to remain neutral, was under treaty obligation to do so and could not allow Germany's request.

What did Germany do August 3?

She declared war on France, falsely claiming that it was in self-defense.

Was this common Prussian policy?

Yes; for instance, Bismarck brought on the war in 1870 by a forged paper.

Who testified that Germany really wanted to bring on war in 1914?

Prince Lichnowsky, German ambassador in Great Britain.

What happened to Prince Lichnowsky?

He was expelled from the upper house of the Prussian parliament.

Who else gave similar testimony?

A former director of the Krupp works, after his retirement into Switzerland.

What did Germany do August 4?

She sent troops across the Belgian frontier and declared war on Belgium and also sent troops through Luxemburg another small country that did not risk resistance.

What proved that the German government was not proud of this dishonorable action?

Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg in a speech to the German parliament the same day acknowledged it as a wrong and promised to make amends to Belgium later.

GREAT BRITAIN'S ENTRANCE.

What did England do the same day?

She declared war on Germany in defense of the neutrality of Belgium.

How had Germany tried to get Great Britain to stay out of the war?

By promising not to take any part of France at the end of the war and to restore Belgium, though refusing to promise not to take French colonies.

What did the German Chancellor say to the English representative on learning that Great Britain would fight for Belgium's neutrality?

He was surprised that the English should think "a mere scrap of paper" so important.

What did he mean by the "mere scrap of paper"?

The treaty signed by his nation and others.

Did not the German government feel obliged to observe its own treaty?

German writers recognized as authority had already said a country could not be bound by its promises in a treaty when it was to its interest to break them.

What must Germany be taught in this war?

That it does not pay a nation to break its promises.

What two disappointments did Germany thus suffer at the very beginning?

She was surprised that Belgium should dare to refuse passage and that England would fight to keep her promises.

Why did she suppose England would not dare go to war?

She thought England would fear revolts in India, South Africa, Ireland, etc.

How had the Kaiser tried to assist in bringing on such troubles?

He had promised to guarantee the independence of South Africa, if that country would revolt.

What shows that the German government had never intended to keep its pledge as to Belgian neutrality?

The writings of Germans and the fact that a complete system of railroads, prepared to transport troops rapidly, led to the Belgian boundary, roads not really needed for other purposes.

Why did Germany want to go across Belgium?

Because it seemed to be the easy way to go.

Why did she not go right across her own boundary into France?

Because the country is rough and had been very strongly fortified by France.

Why had France no strong forts on the Belgian boundary?

Because, apparently, she had trusted the German promises in the treaty neutralizing Belgium.

Why did Germany wish to attack France first?

Because she expected Russia to be slow in mobilizing and hoped to defeat France before Russia was ready to fight.

How long did Germany expect it to take to conquer France?

The Kaiser expected to take his 1914 Christmas dinner in Paris.

Has he had a Christmas dinner there?

Not yet; he has missed four chances.

THE FIRST GREAT GERMAN ADVANCE.

What first checked German progress?

The Belgians held them about two weeks before and around the strong fortress of Liege (Lee-azh); Brussels was not a fortified city and surrendered without a fight; other battles took place at Namur and Mons, delaying the Germans until August 26.

For what did this delay give time?

For the French armies to gather and for the English to land troops in France.

What was the further effect?

To save Paris.

How far did Germany advance?

The German forces swept over a large part of northern France, pushing back the French and English armies.

Did Paris come into great danger?

Within the sound of artillery of German forces touching the outer defensive works.

To what extent was fear of German success shown in Paris?

The government offices and a large part of the population left the city.

What unconfirmed report, which may be true, illustrates the greatness of the danger?

That the German armies might have broken through to Paris one day had the Kaiser not ordered a halt until the Crown Prince could come up and have the honor of entering Paris first.

Could the French alone have saved it?

It seems quite certain that they could not have done so without the help of the English.

What then happened?

By a series of most bitter fights, known as the battle of the Marne, Sept. 6 to 10, 1914, the Germans were driven back to the Aisne river, where both sides were brought to a stop.

What did the Germans still hold?

The greater part of Belgium and a considerable part of northern France.

What especial advantages has the possession of this territory given them?

They hold very valuable iron and coal mines, factories and ports.

Which great Belgian seaport surrendered October 8?

Antwerp, it being proved that the strongest forts are useless against the newer type of siege guns, such as the Germans used.

A NEW SORT OF WARFARE.

What kind of fighting continued about three and one-half years on the 300-mile line from the North sea to the Swiss border?

Trench warfare, with the use of barbed wire entanglements, bloody attacks and repulses with little movement of armies either way, great artillery duels, curtain or barrage fire, great armored tractor engines called tanks, poisonous gas, liquid fire, airplanes, etc., with greater numbers of men engaged, greater losses and greater expense than the world had ever known.

What is camouflage?

The art of concealment of objects from the view of the enemy or making them appear something else than what they are.

What of poisonous gas and liquid fire?

These had been considered uncivilized; but they were introduced by the Germans and afterward used on both sides.

What especial conflicts took place here in 1914?

A series of fights near the border of France and Belgium, known as the battles of the Yser and of Ypres, checking German attempts to take the ports on the English Channel.

What agreement did Great Britain, France and Russia make about a month after the war began?

That no one of them would make a separate peace with Germany or Austria.

BELGIUM'S MISERY.

What has been the fate of the Belgian and French people of the occupied territory?

They have been robbed, ruined, starved, often barbarously mistreated, reduced to slavery, executed without trial or reason, all because they dared defend their rights.

How have they been robbed?

Private houses were looted by German soldiers and officers; their provisions, animals and machinery taken from them and each city or district has been compelled to furnish great sums of money.

How have they been ruined?

Many cities have been burned wantonly or destroyed by bombardment, including churches, schools, all sorts of public and private buildings, even farm lands being often ruined. Records are kept of the destruction of 43,000 estates in Belgium.

To what extent have they been starved?

Never have they had sufficient food. The U. S. alone contributes to the Commission for Relief in Belgium $12,500,000 per month.

How have they been barbarously treated?

Especially in the early days of the war, thousands of innocent men, women and children were insulted and mistreated beyond the power of expression by brutal soldiers and insolent officers.

How have they been reduced to slavery?

On various excuses from 100,000 to 300,000 have been torn from their homes and deported into Germany to work for their conquerors.

What did Brand Whitlock, our minister to Belgium during this time, say of this action?

"A deed so cruel that German soldiers are said to have wept in its execution and so monstrous that even German officers are now said to be ashamed."

How were the innocent executed?

There were many cases in which citizens were shot down or executed by orders, on the mere accusation that some one of the same town had shot at German soldiers.

Is Belgium yet free?

No; four years of this awful subjection to tyranny have passed but the Germans still hold this country.

Who is Cardinal Mercier?

The Archbishop of Malines in Belgium, who sent to all priests and congregations under his charge at Christmas in 1914 a letter telling the truth about this tyranny, yet advising them to wait patiently for the end.

Was he punished for this action?

No; no one has dared to punish directly this heroic and good man for telling the truth.

Who was Miss Edith Cavell?

An English nurse executed by the Germans in Belgium for assisting wounded English and Belgian young men to escape to Holland.

OTHER EVENTS OF 1914.

What happened along the German-Russian front in 1914?

The Russians invaded East Prussia but were defeated severely and driven out.

What happened on the Austro-Russian front?

The Russians took nearly all of the province of Galicia from August to March of the next year.

What became of St. Petersburg?

Because the name was German, the Russian government changed it to Petrograd, which is Slavic.

Did a rebellion occur in South Africa?

Yes; but it did not last long, the great majority of the people proving loyal to the British empire.

What did Japan do in the cause of the Allies?

In November she took Tsingtau on Kiaochow bay in China, which Germany had seized in 1897.

What happened in Egypt?

The country was taken fully under British protection, the Khedive removed and a Sultan appointed.

TURKEY'S ENTRANCE.

What other country had come to the aid of Germany and Austria in 1914?
Turkey, in November of 1914.

What is Turkey?

A Mohammedan power which has had its capital at Constantinople since 1453.

How far did the Turks carry their conquests into Europe?

They once besieged Vienna.

What are states that Turkey once held but has since lost?

Greece, Serbia, Montenegro, Bosnia, Bulgaria, Albania, Roumania, Egypt, etc.

Why is Constantinople of great importance?

It controls the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus, the only straits giving passage from the Black sea to the Mediterranean.

What is the effect on Russia of having these straits held by the Turks?

It prevents their shipping grain and other products except with the consent of Turkey.

Are other nations hindered in their shipping in the same way?

Yes, the straits are not free to any of them.

Why have not all the nations of Europe long ago compelled Turkey to open these straits to all?

Largely because of jealousy of one another,—fear that others might secure greater advantages.

What was probably the chief reason for the entrance of Turkey into the war?

Fear of being driven out of Constantinople and Europe, especially by Russia.

What countries not inhabited chiefly by Turks did Turkey still hold?

Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia, Arabia and Armenia.

Who were the real rulers of Turkey?

Not the nominal sovereign, the Sultan, but Enver Pasha and Talaat Bey, leaders of the "Young Turk" party, which controlled the government.

THE MOSLEM HOLY WAR.

What chief advantage did Germany hope from the alliance with Turkey?

The bringing on of a Moslem "Holy War" a general uprising of all Mohammedans to slaughter Christians.

How did they expect this to help?

By bringing on rebellions against Great Britain, France and Russia by more than a hundred million Mohammedans in India, Egypt, the Sudan, Tripoli, Algeria, South Russia, etc.

How do we know Germany hoped for this?

Count Wangenheim, German ambassador to Turkey, told it to Henry Morgenthau, American ambassador, before our entrance into the war was expected.

Was a "Holy War" ordered?

Yes; shortly after Turkey entered the war, by authority of the Sultan as Caliph or successor of Mohammed.

Who was Mohammed?

He was an Arab who, claiming authority as a prophet, founded at Mecca and Medina in Arabia about 600 A. D., a new religion which is now followed by many millions from Central Africa to the Philippine Islands.

What was the first great Mohammedan capital?

Bagdad on the Tigris, whence the rule of the Arabic Caliphs extended over a wide empire.

Who were the Turks in early times?

A Mongolian race from Central Asia who gradually overran western Asia, became Mohammedans, took Bagdad and assumed the authority of the Caliphs over all Mohammedans.

Did the "Holy War" scheme succeed?

No; the Mohammedan peoples were better satisfied with their present governments than they would be with that of the Turks.

What peculiar and inconsistent exception was made in the proclamation ordering the slaying of all Christians?

"Excepting those with whom Turkey has a covenant;" that is, Germany and Austria.

THE ENTRANCE OF ITALY, 1915.

What country came into the war a little later with the Allies?

Italy declared war on Austria in May, on Turkey in August of 1915 and afterward on Germany in August of 1916.

How recently had Italy been at war with Turkey before?

In 1911-12, when Italy took the control of Tripoli from Turkey.

What is Italy?

A great country in the south of Europe, occupying the central peninsula and reaching to the high Alps mountains.

Is it an old or a young country in civilization?

Next to Greece, it is the oldest in Europe.

For what is it especially famous?

Its capital, Rome, was the center of the great Roman empire which ruled the world for hundreds of years.

Was not Italy one of the Triple Alliance?

Yes.

Why, then, did Italy not join with Germany and Austria in the war?

Because they had not been attacked but had attacked other countries.

What did Italy have against Austria?

Some districts and cities in Austria are inhabited by Italians chiefly and Italy claims they should belong to the kingdom of Italy.

By what name do the Italians call these regions?

Italia Irredenta; that is, Unredeemed Italy, — territory not included when the new kingdom of Italy was formed.

Was there any other cause for attacking Austria?

Yes; a fear that Austria was planning to control the Adriatic Sea to the disadvantage of Italy.

OTHER EVENTS OF 1915.

What happened on the German-Russian front in 1915?

The Russians again invaded East Prussia, but were driven out and the Germans took Warsaw and all of Russian Poland.

What happened on the Austro-Russian front?

The Russians advanced through the Carpathian mountains and threatened the Hungarian plains but were forced back until the Austrians and Germans regained all Galicia.

What was the chief cause of the Russian failures this year?

Lack of ammunition and other supplies.

What great failure came to the English and French in 1915?

A disastrous attempt to take the Dardanelles and capture Constantinople.

What did they lose on the sea here?

Several of the greatest battleships.

What on land?

On the Gallipoli peninsula, after fighting all summer and fall, many thousands of men were lost and the attempt abandoned altogether.

When did the fourth country join with the Central Powers?

Bulgaria in October of 1915 declared war against Serbia.

What is Bulgaria?

A country partly of Slavic race between Serbia and Turkey.

How did it happen to come to this side?

Just a few years before in 1912-13, Serbia, Bulgaria and Greece had joined in a war against Turkey rather successfully; but this had been followed by a quarrel and a still more bitter war against Bulgaria by Serbia and Greece, assisted at the last by Roumania, in which Bulgaria was defeated.

What happened to Serbia?

After defending itself well over a year, it was completely conquered by German, Bulgarian and Austrian armies in October and November, 1915.

What great advantage did the conquest of Serbia open up to Germany?

The roads through Bulgaria and Turkey to Constantinople and Bagdad.

What old plan of Germany did this promote?

The scheme of controlling the Balkan states and all the country extending to the Persian gulf, with a railroad from Berlin to Bagdad, or beyond.

Why was this desired?

In order to compete with England for influence and trade in Asia.

What attempt did the Turks make toward Egypt early in 1915?

To attack the Suez canal; but they were easily repulsed.

Where did Germany lose in 1915?

She lost colonies in Africa and elsewhere, finally losing every one.

Were Germany's colonies very valuable?

They were very large but, as she had begun late to acquire colonies, they were in hot countries only, where Europeans can not live long and work.

Where would she probably like to possess colonies?

In any part of the temperate zones.

What relation had the United States to the war in 1915?

Neutrality, disturbed by grievances against Germany concerning violations of American right by submarines, afterward discussed.

EVENTS OF 1916.

What was the greatest of all struggles of 1916 and of all history up to that time.

The unsuccessful attempt of the Germans under the imperial crown prince, the Kaiser's eldest son and heir, to take the fortress of Verdun.

How long did this continue?

About five months, February to July.

What then happened?

The loss of German life having become so great that German soldiers called this region "the grave," the attacks ceased and the French rewon most of the positions taken earlier.

What other great series of fights took place on the western front?

Through July to November in the northern part of France the Battle of the Somme continued in which the Allies attacked strongly but did not break the German line.

What countries entered the war this year?

Portugal, as an ally of Great Britain, and Roumania.

What is Portugal?

A small republic occupying the part of the Iberian peninsula not belonging to Spain, with a somewhat different language and some important colonies.

What is Roumania?

A country east of Austria, north of Bulgaria and southwest of Russia.

To which race division do the Roumanians belong?

Perhaps their blood is mostly Slavic but their language was derived from the ancient Romans and they are counted with the Latins.

To what country had Roumania long been especially friendly?

To Italy; also to Russia.

What did Roumania hope to get?

Territory in Austria, known as Transylvania, inhabited chiefly by people of the Roumanian race.

What did she fear?

That she might be treated as Serbia had been, if the Central Powers won.

What encouraged her to go in?

The success of the campaign Russia was fighting and the failure of the Germans at Verdun.

What was the result?

She was at first successful but afterward was disastrously defeated and lost most of her territory.

What did Germany secure in Roumania?

Valuable oil wells and wheat fields.

What did the British do this year?

They held a part of the western front; adopted conscription in Great Britain; won the one great naval battle of the war off Jutland; put down an insurrection in Ireland; and suffered a severe loss in Mesopotamia, where Gen. Townshend had to surrender his whole army at Kut-el-Amara, below Bagdad.

What happened on the Italian front?

The Austrian forces first advanced and then were repulsed until the Italians advanced over the mountains and threatened Trieste, the chief seaport of Austria.

What did Russia do?

Russia made a surprising attack and won back in a few weeks twice as much land as Germany held in France.

What was the part of the United States?

Gradually the situation caused by the submarine warfare of Germany was becoming more tense, the feeling of the country toward Germany more hostile.

Near the end of the year what offer did Germany make?

An offer to discuss peace; but no terms were given and the Allies did not consider it seriously.

What general principles of any peace that the United States could approve did President Wilson soon after state to the Senate?

1. Recognition of equal rights of all nations.
2. Recognition of the principle that all governments derive their just powers from the consent of the governed.
3. Complete freedom of the seas.
4. Restriction of armaments on land and sea.
5. Establishment of a world league to enforce peace.

EVENTS OF 1917.

What was the great event in Russia in 1917?

March 15, 1917, Czar Nicholas was forced to abdicate the throne.

Why was he dethroned?

Because, it was alleged, he had allowed the power to get into the hands of pro-German traitors.

For what disaster were these German agents or sympathizers responsible?

For the defeat of Roumania, by keeping guns and ammunition from its forces; also, for lack of supplies to Russia's own armies.

What kind of government was attempted?

A republic, in which Kerensky very soon became the chief leader, as premier.

What part did this government take in the war?

A strong attack was made in Galicia and many prisoners were taken, followed by defeat and retreat.

What happened later?

The government of Kerensky was overthrown by the party known as the Bolsheviks.

Who are the Bolsheviks?

Leaders who claim to represent the workmen, peasants and soldiers and demand that all property and power be placed in the hands of the common people.

What does the name mean?

It is variously said to mean, "belonging to the majority" or "those who want more."

Where were peace negotiations begun?

At Brest-Litovsk in Russia.

What other monarch than Czar Nicholas lost his throne in 1917?

George, the King of Greece.

What is Greece?

A peninsula in the southeast of Europe, the oldest civilized part.

What part had Greece taken in the war?

For a long while she remained neutral but she now joined the enemies of Germany.

What personal influence had helped to keep Greece favorable to Germany?

The queen of Greece, King George's wife, was a sister of the German Kaiser.

To whom did George leave the throne?

To his son Alexander, who was favorable to the Entente.

What had probably been the real sentiment of the Greek people?

They seem to have favored the Entente.

Who was their chief leader?

Venizelos, prime minister most of the time since 1909, successful in the Balkan wars, etc.

How had the country been controlled for some time?

It had been guarded by British and French forces.

Where in Greece has a large force been stationed before and since?

At Saloniki, whence a line now stretches west to the Adriatic sea in Albania, where Italian forces progressed in 1918.

What happened in Mesopotamia in 1917?

A new English army under Gen. Maude pressed on and captured Bagdad.

What happened at the east end of the Mediterranean?

The English took half of Palestine, having forced the Turks all the way back from Suez and built a railroad all the way from Cairo to Jerusalem.

What pleasing success occurred just before Christmas in 1917?

The English took Jerusalem and Bethlehem, the birthplace of Jesus. Gen. Allenby progressed farther and won a great victory over the Turks, led by Germans, near the end of September, 1918.

How long has this Holy Land of both Jews and Christians been in the hands of the Mohammedans?

Nearly thirteen hundred years, except about one hundred years when there was a Christian kingdom of Jerusalem.

Who were the Christians who held it?

Crusaders, who took up the fight against the Turks about eight hundred years ago.

What was done on the Italian front?

After a successful summer campaign in which the Italians captured new positions, the Austrians, freed from fear of Russia, made a strong attack and drove the Italians back into their own country, to the Piave and Brenta rivers, where they held their ground in December.

What progress was made on the western front?

In March, the Germans retired from Arras to Soissons, to the so-called "Hindenburg line," giving up about 1,300 square miles of territory.

What did they do to this territory?

They utterly destroyed everything in it, buildings, trees, wells, crops.

Where else did the fighting favor the Allies?

The British gained at Arras, Vimy Ridge, Messines Ridge, in Flanders, and especially at Cambrai; while the French gained along the Aisne, near Verdun and at Chemin des Dames ridge.

What was perhaps the greatest event of the year 1917?

The entrance of the United States into the war, for reasons told later, and its great preparations for active warfare and assistance to the Allies.

What other large country joined the Allies in this year?

Brazil, a country nearly as large as the United States but with only one-fourth the population and largely in the torrid zone. A large colony of Germans exists in the southern part.

What other nations also joined the Allies.

Cuba, Panama, Siam, Liberia and China.

EVENTS OF 1918.

How did the new Russian government disappoint the Allies?

By making peace contrary to the agreement not to make peace separately.

What had already existed several weeks?

An armistice, an agreement that neither side would fight nor take an advantage while peace was being considered.

What use did Germany make of this truce as well as of the peace following?

She brought great numbers of troops from the Russian to the western front.

What did the Russian government attempt when not satisfied with German offers?

Merely to quit the war without making a treaty of peace.

What was it afterward forced to do?

To agree to all of Germany's demands and sign the treaty of Brest-Litovsk.

What was done with the Russian territory and people?

Poland, Lithuania, Courland, Livonia, Esthonia, Finland, Ukrania are under governments of some sort, separate from that of the Bolsheviki. All are largely under German control. The Murman coast on the Arctic is held by Allied troops to protect valuable supplies landed there at ice-free ports. Czecho-Slovak prisoners from the Austro-Hungarian army hold parts of Siberia, and Japan and the United States have agreed to intervene to protect supplies at Vladivostok and elsewhere near the Pacific.

Who are the Czecho-Slovaks?

Those of whom we heard in the summer of 1918 are Bohemians taken prisoner by Russia during the war who, after the Russian revolution, started for the Pacific across Russia and Siberia desiring to fight Austria. Our government has recognized them as belligerents.

What other country was likewise forced to make peace as dictated by Germany?

Roumania.

Have the Central Powers gained supplies from Ukrania and Roumania?

Yes; but probably much less than was hoped; because disorganized conditions have resulted in greatly diminished products scarcely sufficient for home use and transportation has also been difficult.

What happened early on the western front?

After long preparation, the Germans began a very great battle March 21, made four attacks, one after the other, won considerable territory, suffered terrible losses, fought six weeks and failed to break the English and French lines or to reach the sea.

What was done in Italy?

In June the Austrian army made a great attack, successful at first but quickly turned into a complete failure with great losses.

What happened later in the summer?

A fifth German offensive was begun July 15, in which the Marne was crossed; but in three days the French, with strong American assistance, checked the German forces, and drove them back. The British took up the fight and by October 1, nearly all of the territory lost since March 21 was regained and more was taken.

What important improvement in military administration was announced during the German drive?

General Foch was made generalissimo, commander of all the forces of all the Allies.

USE OF AIRSHIPS IN THIS WAR.

What two main types of airships have been used in this war?

Dirigible gas balloons and airplanes.

What is a Zeppelin?

A gas balloon with a long body and a steering apparatus carrying a large car, with a considerable load.

What are airplanes?

Machines heavier than air which sail like birds when driven by engines against the air.

What are the two main uses of air-ships in war?

Observation and bombing.

How are they used for observation?

They are sent up to see what is behind the lines of the enemy, to take photographs, make maps, etc.

Why do commanders want this information?

To guide them in directing the fire of artillery and in placing their forces against the enemy.

What if one side could have all the observers and keep the other side from sending them up?

The other side would be "blind." The one having the observers could move without being seen.

Do the aviators have to come down to tell what they have seen?

No; they send news to the ground by wireless telegraphy.

How are we preparing young men for this work?

By teaching them to send and receive messages in wireless telegraphy in special classes in our schools before they go to war.

What is the second chief use of air-ships?

Bombing or otherwise doing injury by dropping missiles.

What are the usual objectives?

Fortifications, docks, ships, railroads, war buildings, factories, piles of ammunition, supplies or enemy forces.

Of what unlawful uses of bombs have the Germans been accused?

Of dropping them on hospitals, hospital ships, and other non-military objects.

How has Germany used air-ships against England?

By sending them across the English channel at night to drop bombs on London and other places.

Have they thus done much damage?

In 34 raids, Jan., 1915 to Oct., 1917, they killed 865 men, women and children and wounded 2,500; but have not done much to weaken England.

What has probably been the chief purpose of these raids?

To frighten the English population with the danger of instant death, to let them know their island does not make them safe from German wrath.

Have they produced the desired effect?

No; they have doubtless served only to enrage the English and strengthen greatly their determination to fight.

How is defense made against airship attacks?

By other airships which rise to fight them and by high range guns and search lights operated from the ground.

How do aviators fight?

By attacking one another singly or in squadrons by machine guns mounted in their planes, with bombs or fire, the loser falling or being forced to the ground.

To what may the fighting of squadrons of airplanes be compared?

To a game of football in the sky, each side having as its goal passage over the enemy's country to observe, photograph, bomb and having to break the opposing line to gain this goal.

When is an aviator called an "Ace"?

When he has brought down five or more enemy machines.

What has the United States done in the air service?

We have established a number of great flying schools, or training fields, supplied all students with enough training machines and have sent some machines and aviators abroad.

Has our program been successful?

The facts are partly military secrets. Great disappointment was expressed last year because it was believed progress had been too slow; yet on July 24, 1918, General Brancker of the British air ministry complimented the United States for having created its air service so rapidly and efficiently as it has.

What is now expected of our air service?

That it will soon become a force so great as to prove a decisive factor in winning the war.

THE PART OF THE SUBMARINE IN THE WAR.

What is a submarine?

A boat which may travel on the surface of the water or be sunk entirely below the surface.

How may it be propelled while traveling on the surface of the sea?

By engines of any kind.

How must it be propelled when submerged?

By electric motors, which make no smoke.

How do officers of submarines see what is on the surface?

By means of a periscope, a tube reaching above the surface and fitted

- with a system of mirrors to show the surface of the sea to the observer below.
- Which side can make most use of submarines?
The one that has not control of the surface of the sea.
- Why?
The submarine may easily find ships on the surface but it is hard to find the submarine.
- Which side has therefore found them useful in this war?
Germany.
- Which nation has suffered most from them?
England; because she has the greatest amount of shipping to be attacked.
- Why has England so many ships?
Because she has the greatest manufacturing industry and the greatest trade of the world.
- What is a large part of her trade?
The shipping in of raw materials and food, as she produces far less than she needs.
- What has Germany hoped to accomplish by sinking English and neutral ships?
To force England to give up by making food and other supplies scarce.
- How many English ships have been sunk?
In 57 weeks the loss of 1419 was reported.
- How great have been the losses up to date?
It is estimated that shipping having a carrying capacity of 8,000,000 tons has been destroyed.
- Can ships and cargoes sunk in the ocean ever be recovered?
Never, unless they are sunk in shallow water.
- Why not?
Divers can not go down and do effective work farther than 100 to 150 feet below the surface, on account of the great pressure of the water.
- Can submarines go down to the bottom of the ocean to rest?
Not safely, except in shallow waters.
- How are ships sunk?
Either by floating mines containing great charges of explosives that are discharged when struck, or by means of torpedoes.
- What is a torpedo?
A large cigar-shaped instrument carrying a large charge of explosives driven through the water by compressed air and exploding on striking the vessel at which it is fired.
- Why is England not willing to give up after losing so many ships?
She claims that we are sinking submarines faster than Germany builds them and building ships faster than Germany sinks them.
- What is our present gain said to be, August, 1918?
About 100,000 tons of shipping per month.
- Will it soon be greater?
Very much; because the United States and Great Britain are now building a very great number of new ships.
- Why can the Allies not use submarines so well against Germany?
Because Germany has no ships on the surface of the seas to be sunk.
- NAVIES IN THE WAR.
- What prevents Germany from sending out ships?
England's powerful navy.
- Why does Germany not use its own warships against England?
Because she does not have enough of them to meet the English fleets.
- How did the navies of the world rank at the beginning of this war?
Great Britain, Germany, United States, France, Japan, Italy, Russia, Austria-Hungary.
- What are different types of war vessels named?
A battleship is a heavily armed and armored vessel; a dreadnaught is a battleship of the heaviest class; a cruiser is a somewhat lighter and swifter ship; a torpedo boat, a small, swift vessel equipped to fire torpedoes; a destroyer, a larger and swifter torpedo boat to fight others.

What had long been Great Britain's policy as to the navy?

To have one at least as strong as the next two greatest in the world together.

Where have the German warships been during the most of the war?

It is believed that most of them have been in the Kiel canal, connecting the North Sea and the Baltic, the improvement of which to admit great ships was just finished in 1914, and in the Baltic sea itself.

Has Germany made any use of its navy in this war?

Yes, in several ways.

What was the first use of warships?

Near the beginning of the war several German warships known as "raiders" captured or sank a considerable number of ships in the Atlantic ocean and elsewhere on the seas.

What was the second use of the German navy?

Also early in the war some German ships bombarded Scarborough, an undefended town on the east coast of England.

What was a third use of German warships?

Near Denmark, May 31, 1916, was fought one of the greatest battles of warships in history, the battle of Jutland.

What was the result of this battle?

There were great losses on both sides; but the German navy has never since dared to come out in great force.

What became of the German raiders?

They were either sunk by English war vessels or forced into the ports of neutral countries.

What is done with a war vessel that takes refuge in a neutral port?

It must leave in a certain number of hours or be interned.

What does this mean?

That it is kept in the neutral port in which it takes refuge and not allowed to leave until the end of the war.

What is done with its crew?

They are interned also.

Did some of the German raiders come into U. S. ports?

Yes. We interned them and their crews and, after we went to war ourselves with Germany, took possession of them for our own uses.

Where else has Germany made use of her navy?

In the Baltic sea against Russia.

What chances to get supplies by sea have the Central Powers had?

They have had access to the Baltic, the Black and the Adriatic seas only, with one small exception.

What was that?

Twice during 1916 a German unarmed submarine of large size, the Deutschland, appeared at United States ports bringing dyestuffs and taking cargoes of rubber, nickel, etc.

Was this ship admitted to our ports and protected?

Yes; as it was unarmed it had to be accepted as a merchant ship.

In attempting to shut off supplies from Germany, the Allies have been led to the rationing of neutral nations. What does this mean?

That they are permitted to have foodstuffs and other materials just sufficient to provide for themselves and provided they do not sell to enemy nations.

OUR EARLY PERIOD OF NEUTRALITY.

When this war began in Europe, what position did the U. S. take?

One of strict neutrality, proclaimed Aug. 4, 1914.

What did President Wilson ask?

He asked that all Americans be neutral not only in actions and speech but also in thought, so far as possible.

With which side did the most of our people probably sympathize in their private opinions?

With that of the Allies against Germany.

Was this because they did not like Germans?

No; we had found Germans who had come to this country good neighbors and citizens and many of us are descended from Germans.

What good characteristics have we usually found in Germans?

That they are industrious, honest and sociable.

What did we think of the Germans in Europe?

We admired their efficient business management and industry, their music, their literature and art and their good schools.

What proves that this country was unusually favorable to Germany?

The fact that the German language had long been the most popular one of all foreign languages in our schools and colleges.

What did we not admire so much?

The German government, especially its military tendency.

Did we say or think much of this?

No; for we thought it had nothing to do with us and we need not be concerned about it, if the Germans liked it.

Did all the Germans like it?

No; many who came to this country left Germany to escape from such government.

What caused most Americans to become unfavorable to Germany soon after the war began?

Their opinion that the actions of Germany were wrong.

What was Germany's first wrong?

Encouraging Austria in unreasonable demands on Serbia.

What was Germany's second and greatest wrong?

The violation of Belgian neutrality involving disregard of her own word of honor.

GERMAN ATROCITIES.

What third wrong was charged to Germany?

Barbarous cruelty in the conduct of the war in Belgium, France, Poland, Serbia.

What has this barbarity included?

Burning towns and killing citizens for the fault of single persons, not always proved; firing on hospitals, hospital ships and Red Cross workers without cause; shelling life-boats at sea; placing captured women and children in front of advancing troops; holding citizens as hostages; enslaving and abusing civilians; mistreating prisoners, inoculating them with diseases, etc.

What proof of such cruelties do we have?

The testimony of reliable witnesses collected by careful investigation, especially of a British commission headed by Lord Bryce.

Who says that Lord Bryce's evidence seems conclusive?

Ex-President Wm. H. Taft, himself an experienced lawyer and jurist.

Were these barbarous acts those of degraded individual soldiers only?

There is proof that some of them were such as must have been permitted by officers of high rank.

What proof do we have that such things were intentional?

The writings of German authorities before the war who spoke of the necessity of treating the people of occupied districts with the utmost severity.

What reason was given?

That that is the best way of making German soldiers safe.

What has been the common German excuse for every wrong done?

"Military necessity." Anything that will help Germany to win is right. Cruelty shortens war.

What was this barbarous policy called by the Germans themselves?

Frightfulness, Schrecklichkeit.

Has the present Kaiser himself advised its use?

Yes; in 1900 when sending troops to help put down the Boxer rebellion in China he told them to give no quarter, take no prisoners, so treat the Chinese that no Chinaman would ever again dare look askance at a German.

Whom did he quote as an example for them?

The Huns of a thousand years ago.

Who were the Huns?

A tribe of Asiatic barbarians who overran Europe in the Middle Ages and were noted for their cruelty.

Who was their king?

Attila, called "The Scourge of God."

What has this advice of the Kaiser led to?

The common use of the word "Huns" to denote the Germans in this present war.

ALLIANCE WITH TURKEY.

What doubtless increased the feeling against Germany?

Her alliance with the Turks, a nation noted for cruelty.

Was this alliance a new one just sought for help in this present war?

No; it had been carefully cultivated for many years.

What shows this?

The Turkish army had long been advised and drilled by German officers; Turkish forts were armed with German cannon; German warships were turned over to Turkey.

To whom had the Turks been especially cruel?

To Christian nations under their government at different times—to Greeks, Bulgarians, Armenians.

Who are the Armenians?

A Christian nation living east of Asia Minor, near Persia, under Turkish rule.

How have the Armenians often suffered?

From persecutions and massacres, especially by their savage neighbors, the Kurds, unrestrained or assisted by the Turkish soldiers. Such attacks occurred in 1895 and 1909.

What has kept the Turks somewhat in check heretofore?

The influence of the great nations of Europe.

What has happened to the Armenians since the beginning of this war?

They have been murdered by hundreds of thousands, perhaps a million having perished, especially in 1915.

Which was the only European nation that might have influenced the Turks to spare the Armenians this time?

Germany; but she did not do it.

ILL FEELING OVER SALES OF MUNITIONS

For what did Germany blame the United States soon after the war began?

For selling great quantities of ammunition and other war supplies to her enemies.

Were these sales made by our government?

No; they were made by private citizens or companies.

On what ground did she object to the American sales?

On the ground that it was unneutral for us to sell to one side only.

What was our reply?

That we would sell munitions to Germany too, if she would come and get them.

Why could she not do this?

Because England's navy stood in the way.

To what did we refer as to the right to make such sales?

To the rule of international law.

What is international law?

It is what the nations of the world have agreed to in treaties and by the practice of years.

What is the rule of international law in such cases?

It is legal for the citizens of a neutral country to sell such supplies to nations at war.

Had Germany ever sold such supplies to nations at war?

Often; even before this war the Krupp munition factories were the largest in the world and sold to many nations.

Some good people said we should change the rule and not sell to any one munitions with which to fight and kill; why not?

Because we might some time need to purchase munitions ourselves and such a new rule would prevent it.

Which nations would be favored by such a change of rule?

Those nations that make a business of preparing for war.

How?

A nation which had for years piled up ammunition, as Germany had, could defeat at once a nation that had not so prepared and could not buy.

What was our position?

We did not want to encourage war and had not prepared greatly for it.

In case of war, what would be our first need?

To purchase munitions from neutral nations.

What caused the most of the reverses and lack of progress of the Russians, the Italians, the Roumanians, even of the French and British early in the war?

Insufficiency of supply of guns and ammunition.

OTHER CAUSES OF CONTROVERSY

What did Germany do to increase the feeling against her still further?

She sent spies who caused a number of explosions in our factories, plotted to destroy ships by concealed bombs, and caused other troubles.

Have we proof that this was done by the German government?

Yes; we know that money was supplied for spies through the German ambassador's office.

What special attempt of Austria was discovered in 1915, when letters sent by Dr. Dumba, the Austro-Hungarian ambassador were intercepted?

That the ambassador advised the promoting of disturbances in munitions factories in America. Dr. Dumba was recalled in November at the request of our government.

Who was carrying this letter?

An American traveler who claimed to be ignorant of its nature.

THE GROWING SUBMARINE CONTROVERSY.

What did the most to force the United States into war with Germany?

Germany's way of using submarines.

What are the high seas?

All waters of the ocean more than three miles outside of the coast-line of any country.

To whom do the high seas belong?

To all nations in common.

What right have all nations on the high seas?

To sail on them, just as all have a right to travel on our public highways, and to be safe from attack, unless at war.

How may that right be limited?

By a regular blockade of ports.

What does this mean?

A notice by one nation at war that ships will not be allowed to enter and leave the ports of an enemy nation.

When does a nation have the right to declare such a blockade?

When it has warships to station near those ports to prevent vessels from entering and leaving.

Does a war vessel have the right to capture a merchant vessel of an enemy country?

Yes, as a prize of war.

Does it have the right to stop a merchant vessel of a neutral country on the high seas?

Yes; to find where it came from, to which port it is bound and whether it has on board contraband goods; that is, goods subject to seizure or destruction because they may benefit enemy nations.

What are the two classes of contraband goods?

Absolute and conditional, the first of use for warlike purposes only and the second either for purposes of war or of peace.

May the war vessel take a neutral vessel as a prize?

Only if found to be carrying contraband goods.

May the war vessel sink a merchant ship after taking it as a prize?

Yes, if it is impossible to take it into port.

May a war vessel sink a merchant ship without warning?

No; neither a neutral nor an enemy ship.

What must be done first?

The merchant ship must be ordered to halt and submit to search.

If the merchant ship attempts to escape after warning, may it be sunk?

Yes.

In all other cases what does international law require the war vessel to do?

First to put passengers and crew of a merchant vessel in a place of safety before sinking it.

COMPLAINTS OF BRITISH ACTS.

Did Great Britain at any time commit acts held by the United States to violate international law?

Yes; by stopping vessels on the high seas and taking them into port for search, thus interfering with mails, etc.

What was England's purpose?

To keep food and supplies from going to Germany through such neutral countries as Holland, Norway, Sweden, etc.

How much of such supplies did she allow to go to these countries?

Only enough for their own needs; for they were selling to Germany.

Had they a right to sell anything they had to spare to Germany?

Yes, just as we had a right to sell to England.

Did the United States object to these acts of Great Britain?

Yes; though claims for damages were left for future settlement, merely property rights being involved and not human life. Moreover, we knew from former experiences that controversies with the British government could be settled satisfactorily through arbitration.

GERMAN CLAIMS FOR SUBMARINES.

How did Germany plan to get even?

By making her own rules for submarines.

Is it easy for a submarine to warn, board and search a merchant ship and take care of its crew and passengers?

No; the submarine being slow, the merchant ship might escape; being light, it might easily be destroyed by a shot from a small cannon such as a merchant ship might carry; being small, it does not have room for many people on board.

What did Germany claim for submarines?

That they were different from any kind of war vessels formerly used and could not be expected to follow the old rules.

What proclamation did Germany make in February, 1915?

She declared a great expanse of the high seas around the British Isles a war zone.

What did she give notice she would do there?

That she would sink without warning any enemy merchant vessel found in those waters.

What were neutrals warned not to do?

Not to travel or ship goods in vessels belonging to the enemies of Germany, on peril of loss of life or goods.

Was this according to international law?

No; it was as if Mr. A told Mr. C not to ride in Mr. B's car anywhere within a mile of B's house, as A intended to blow up B's car there on the public highway.

Would such a notice change Mr. C's right?

No; he would still have the right to ride in B's car on the highway and it would be the duty of the state to uphold him in that right and protect him.

Would it have been safer for Americans not to travel on British ships?

Certainly; but they had a right to do so and our government was bound to uphold them in that right and protect them.

Did Germany threaten neutral merchant ships in the war zone proclaimed?

She instructed her submarine commanders not to sink any of them intentionally, but suggested that mistakes might be made.

What notice to Germany did our government give?

That we regarded her plan of submarine warfare as unlawful.

What further notice was included?

That we would hold Germany strictly to account for any loss or injury to our citizens.

Were many ships sunk near this time?

Yes, nearly a hundred in the next three months, many of them neutral.

Did any American citizens lose their lives?

Yes, a few earlier and over one hundred with the Lusitania, May 7, 1915.

THE LUSITANIA.

What was the Lusitania?

An unarmed English liner of the largest class.

How was she sunk?

By a German submarine, without warning, with the loss of 1154 persons, many of them women and children.

By what special warning had Germany sought to make her case better?

By the publication in the New York newspapers the day before the sailing of the Lusitania, over the signature of the German embassy, of notice that it would be dangerous to sail on that ship.

How was this terrible act received in America?

With the greatest indignation and condemnation and with a strong demand for war on Germany at once.

How was it received in Germany?

With extravagant rejoicing.

How could they rejoice over so outrageous wholesale murder?

They thought it would stop England's supplies and save Germany.

What other purpose may be seen in this and the whole submarine campaign also?

The policy of "frightfulness"; the intention to terrify, shatter the nerves of their opponents, thus frightening them into asking for peace.

Has this policy had any reaction?

Yes, in this very field. Great numbers of submarines have never returned to port, and the Germans do not know whether they have been sunk or captured. We have reports of insanity and mutiny in submarine crews, frightened by these uncertainties.

What did President Wilson do?

He sent a very strong protest and demand for reparation to Germany.

What was the effect?

No promise was secured from Germany; but for a considerable time no more ships were sunk without warning.

What was usually done with crews and passengers of vessels sunk?

They were often set adrift in open boats far from land.

What event next roused the American people?

The sinking three months later of the Arabic, without warning, with the loss of several American lives.

What promise did Germany now make?

That there would be no more such sinkings; but she never made amends for the Lusitania matter.

What made it easier for Germany to make this promise then, in August, 1915?

The fact that the English had sunk or caught most of the German submarines.

How long did she keep the promise?

Until she had built a new fleet of better submarines.

THE SUSSEX.

What was the next event in this campaign?

In March, 1916, the Sussex was sunk without warning, with the loss of about fifty passengers.

What message was now sent to Germany?

That we would cease friendly relations with her, unless she at once promised to cease sinking ships without warning or without saving the lives of those on board.

What was the effect?

She made another promise to observe these laws, demanding, however, that the United States secure strict obedience to international law by Great Britain.

What was the reply of the United States to this demand?

That the rights of the United States could not be allowed to depend in the slightest degree on the action of any other government.

UNRESTRICTED SINKINGS RESUMED.

What change came at the end of January, 1917?

Germany announced that England had not obeyed international law strictly, so Germany would not either.

What difference was there between the illegal acts of which England was accused and those committed by Germany?

In the former case goods only were involved, and human life in the latter.

What was Germany's notice?

That she would now sink without warning all ships found in great areas around England and France and in the Mediterranean.

How was this threat wider than the former ones?

It included neutral ships also.

Why had this not been done sooner?

Merely because Germany was not ready with enough submarines.

What provision was made for the United States?

We were informed that we might send one ship per week to England along a certain road, provided we painted its sides with great stripes.

THE UNITED STATES CEASES RELATIONS WITH GERMANY

What did we now do?

The President sent the German ambassador home and ordered our ambassador in Germany to come home, Feb. 3, 1917.

What has our ambassador, Mr. Gerard, done since returning?

He has written two books telling of what he saw in the four years he lived in Germany; both are interesting and instructive.

Did this mean that we were making war on Germany?

Not necessarily; but it did indicate that we could not continue friendly relations.

What does it mean to say that the person of an ambassador is sacred?

In all ages an ambassador has been regarded as entitled to protection even in the country of an enemy, and to free passage and safe conduct out of it.

How was this "diplomatic immunity" infringed in Mr Gerard's case?

He was delayed in his departure on the pretext that Ambassador Bernstorff was in danger in this country. He was also asked to sign for the United States a treaty which the German government wished much to have concluded.

Did he sign?

He did not, but stated in a very positive way that he would not.

What did we learn soon after this?

That while we were still keeping friendly relations with Germany she had plotted against us.

In what way?

She had sent a note to Mexico suggesting that that country get Japan to join her in a war against the United States and that Mexico take Texas, Arizona and New Mexico.

What intermediate action was taken in the early part of March, 1917?

The President, after failing to get Congress to act because of the objections in the Senate of a dozen senators, whom he called "willful men", himself ordered our merchant ships to be armed for defense.

THE UNITED STATES AT WAR

What was done near the end of March?

The President called Congress together and, on his recommendation, Congress declared, April 6, that a state of war with Germany existed.

Who then brought on the war?

Germany; we did not declare war on Germany but that she had already begun war on us. We had to fight or submit.

Was war declared on Austria-Hungary at the same time?

Not until Dec. 7, 1917, because it was not until near that time that we met her forces assisting Germany.

Why have we not declared war on Bulgaria and Turkey?

We have not yet come into military contact with them.

What else did Congress do?

It authorized the expenditure for war purposes of vast sums of money and gave the President very great extraordinary powers in war management, directing him "to employ the entire military and naval forces of the United States" and "pledging all the resources of the country to carry the war to a successful issue."

Was it necessary to ask the Congress for these things?

Yes, this being a democratic government only the representatives of the people can declare war or grant the money to carry it on.

Who is commander in chief of all the armies and navies of the U. S.?

The President; it is his business and that of the officers under him to decide how to carry on the war.

THE FIRST FOREIGN ALLIANCE OF THIS COUNTRY.

How has the United States always acted toward wars in Europe?

It has tried to keep out of European quarrels.

What famous person had advised this?

George Washington, our first great general and president, called the "Father of His Country."

Have we not fought with European powers?

Only with England and Spain and then only in our own cause and not in partnership with any European country. This is new for us.

THE MONROE DOCTRINE

What warning had we given Europe to avoid quarrels with us?

The adoption and announcement of the Monroe Doctrine.

How long ago was this done?

Nearly one hundred years ago, when James Monroe was president.

What is the Monroe Doctrine?

The determination of the United States not to allow any transfer of territory in the Western hemisphere to the advantage of European governments.

Does the determination not to let European governments increase control in this hemisphere involve any duties on our sides?

Yes; we must be responsible for order in this hemisphere.

How about Canada and other British, French and Dutch colonies on this continent?

These belonged to European powers before we adopted the Monroe Doctrine.

Do we intend to ask the European governments to give these up?

Not at all; but we insist they shall not take more.

How did European powers lose Mexico and the Central and South American countries?

These gained their freedom from Spain and Portugal by revolution.

How about Alaska?

We bought that from Russia.

How about Cuba?

We freed her from Spain because of the misgovernment of that country.

How about Porto Rico?

We took that for the same reason.

REASONS FOR WAR.

Why did we go to war with Germany?

Because she sank our ships, murdered our citizens, attempted to give us orders limiting our travel on the high seas and tried to stir up other countries against us.

Did we go to war because Germany mistreated Serbia?

No; we did not approve of this but would have left it to European settlement.

Did we go to war because Germany invaded Belgium and mistreated its citizens?

No; that too we would have left to European decision.

Was it because Germany let Turkey butcher the Armenians?

No; we sympathized as individuals with the Armenians but held that it was not the business of this government to interfere.

Was it because Germany wanted to extend her rule over the most of the world by military power?

No; we were not much alarmed about that.

Were we much alarmed about anything?

No; we had supposed our country so great, rich and powerful that no one would ever dare attack us.

Having been attacked and forced into the war have we become interested in all of these European questions?

We must be interested in them now and take part in the settlement of all of them.

If Germany should conquer England and take possession of her navy and of Canada would she be strong enough to attack us at home?

It is plain that she would be.

What then is our only choice?

To fight Germany now with our allies or to fight her later without allies, in either case in self-defense.

What warning of Germany's intentions was given October 22, 1915?

The Kaiser himself said to Mr. Gerard, "I shall stand no nonsense from America after the war."

Is the intention to attack us a new one?

No; about twenty years ago a German diplomat told an American the great German war would begin in "about fifteen years." France, England and the United States were to be defeated in turn.

DEMOCRACY, AUTOCRACY, MILITARISM.

What does President Wilson say we must do in this war?

That we must "make the world safe for democracy."

What is democracy?

A government which the people control.

Is our government a democracy?

Yes; because the people elect those who manage the government or those who appoint them; also, all of those who make the laws.

Is the government of Germany a democracy?

No; the Kaiser has said that his will is the supreme law.

Does Germany not have a parliament elected by the people?

Yes; the Reichstag (rikes-taag), the parliament of the realm, but

Prussia has 236 of its 397 members and it is not much other than "a debating society" in power.

Did the Reichstag decide on going to war, as our Congress does?

No; the Kaiser and his ministers decided to go to war.

Has Germany also a body somewhat like our Senate?

Yes; the Bundesrat, the council of the federation.

How is the Bundesrat different from our Senate?

Its members are not elected by the people but are appointed by the kings, dukes, etc., who are the heads of the different states in Germany.

Was the Bundesrat asked?

No; it must be except in case of a war of defense, but the Kaiser said this was a war of defense.

Is the chancellor, or prime minister, responsible to the Reichstag or to the Kaiser?

To the latter.

Were the German people, then, thrown into this awful war without being asked?

Neither they nor their representatives were asked.

Did they think this was right?

They probably did; for they have been trained to obey.

How can the Kaiser himself think it right for him alone to decide such great matters for the whole people?

He believes that he has been appointed by God to rule the people.

Who is the Emperor of Germany?

Whoever is king of Prussia, is the emperor of Germany.

Could not this constitution be changed?

Not without the consent of the Kaiser; for he controls 20 votes in the Bundesrat and only 14 are necessary to defeat any proposed change.

How has Prussia grown great and powerful?

By means of war, taking more land first from one nation and then from another.

Has Prussia usually tried to keep out of war?

No; the usual Prussian plan seems to have been to prepare well for war and then pick a quarrel with the nation it wished to attack.

Has Prussia preferred to declare war?

No; it has preferred to insult its adversary until it declared war.

Would Germany have been strong enough to defeat any one of the other nations alone?

It seems that she would.

Would she consider the rights of other countries?

German leaders have said that no weaker country has any rights that are against the interests of Germany.

Will it be safe at the end of the present war to leave Germany free to build up a great army again?

Nothing will be safe but complete defeat of Germany and strict limitation of her military establishment.

Are the German rulers tired of militarism?

No; June 16, 1918, the Kaiser said, "I know that Prussian militarism, so much abused by our enemies, which my forefathers and I have matured, has given Germany's sword power to triumph and that victory will bring a peace that will guarantee the German life."

Who will have to defeat Germany?

Our allies have probably done more than half the great task; but the men and the money of the United States seem to be necessary to finish it.

Why was it necessary to enter when we did?

We had to choose between fighting with allies to victory and the probable danger of fighting later without allies.

Are we fighting for these other countries?

Yes; but for our own self-defense at the same time.

Are England, Belgium, and Italy democratic governments?

Yes; the people control these governments.

Do they not have kings?

Yes; but the people's representatives make the laws and control their administration.

Who is the real chief ruler in England?

The prime minister, or premier.

To whom is the prime minister responsible?

To the House of Commons, elected by the people.

What if the House of Commons refuse to support the prime minister?

Another premier must be chosen whom they do approve.

Did Mr. Wilson mean to say that all the countries of the world must have democratic governments?

No; not if the people want to keep a different government.

What if the people of any country want to keep an absolute ruler who thinks that he is God's representative?

It will be that people's affair, if they want to be ruled that way.

What, then, does making the world safe for democracy mean?

That any nation that wants to govern itself shall be safe in doing it.

How shall they be made safe?

By making sure that no selfish government shall ever again dare to attack and outrage weaker peoples who are governing themselves.

If we win this war shall we then prepare for greater wars, as Prussia has done?

It is more probable that the world will never again be so insane as to permit a great war.

How may wars be prevented?

By allowing no nation to train great armies, pile up great war stores, build more terrible forts, etc.

Who could prevent such preparation?

A single international army made up from all countries might act as a police force to control any one disobedient nation.

Can Germany be taken into such a league to keep the peace of the world?

Not under its present government. "No autocratic government could be trusted to keep faith in a concert for peace."—Wilson.

MISTAKES AND HINDRANCES OF GERMANY.

How have the plans of Germany been spoiled at critical phases of this war?

1. By the unexpected delay caused by Belgium.
2. By the unexpected entrance of Great Britain.
3. By the Russian invasion in 1914, compelling retreat from the Marne.
4. By the refusal of Italy to join Germany and her later attack.
5. Most especially by the unexpected entry of America.

When disregarding American rights did the Germans not think we would fight?

They probably thought we would submit to anything to keep the peace.

Why did they think we would not fight?

They believed we cared only for making money and "having a good time."

How have we disproved the accusation of worshiping money?

By spending more already than any one ever dreamed of and by asking for none of it back. And we will spend more willingly.

Why did they think we might be afraid to begin a fight?

They knew there are millions of Germans living in the United States and thought these would rebel and fight for Germany.

Why did they not?

They came here to find a better country and government; they have found it and like it and want to keep it for themselves and their children.

How many of our population are foreigners?

About 13 millions are foreign born and 18 millions more are children of foreign parents.

Of what two classes are Germans and Austrians in this country?

Naturalized citizens and so-called alien enemies.

Have these many "alien enemies" proved dangerous?

Only in a few cases. The most of them are left under only a few restrictions as to place of residence and work, travel, reporting to officials occasionally, etc.

Why did the German leaders think we could not do much, if we did fight?

They knew we were not trained nor prepared for war.

PRESENT SITUATION OF COUNTRIES.

At the present time have the Central Powers or our Allies gained most?

Germany and her allies have gained much more than they have lost in Europe; but Germany has lost all her colonies, about 1,000,000 square miles of territory, one-third as much as the United States.

Which is the only one of Germany's allies that has lost much territory?

Turkey.

What have Germany and Austria done?

They have taken Poland, Serbia, nearly all of Roumania and Belgium, Montenegro, and parts of France and Italy and western Russia.

What especial advantage has this given them?

The destruction of war has been kept outside of their own lands and cities.

How else has it helped them?

It has put into their hands much productive country from which they can procure food, coal, iron, oil and other supplies.

What more have they gained from this occupation of the territory of their enemies?

They have made every occupied city and district pay enormous sums of money to escape destruction.

Do these countries have enough to live on?

We, of course, have no exact knowledge; for they are careful to prevent the giving out of information.

How has their situation been improved recently?

Peace with Russia, Ukrania, Roumania have opened up productive regions supplying much food.

What do we suppose is still their condition?

That they have scanty provisions of food, clothing, coal and metals.

How do they take care of what they have?

No one is permitted to hold large supplies for private use and provisions can be bought only in strictly limited quantities.

How do they strive to produce more?

Women, children, old men all work as much as they can.

Where do women work?

Not only in the homes but also in fields, shops, everywhere they can.

How are the poorer people kept from starving and freezing?

By government provision and by not allowing even the rich to use more than necessary.

Are the people of these countries ready to give up the fight?

We do not know that either; any one talking in favor of doing so would probably be put in prison.

What is the probability?

That the common people of Turkey and Austria would like to quit; and evidence is growing that most of the Germans are very tired of war also.

What influences tend to keep them willing to fight longer?

Their armies have pushed forward nearly everywhere; they have been taught that other nations attacked Germany without just cause; they believe their rulers must be right.

Do the Germans know more of conditions in this country?

They probably do; for our censorship is less strict and more difficult to maintain in so large a country.

Is our situation as to supplies more favorable than theirs?

Yes; they did not raise all they used before the war, while we produced more.

What must we do beside providing for ourselves?

We must furnish our allies great quantities which they need and can not produce.

Will it be necessary for us also to limit the food, clothing, etc., each family can buy?

Yes; many such regulations have been made and more may be necessary. "Food will win the war; do not waste it." Yet great crops and the results of a year of saving give us just now a very promising outlook.

PEACE PROPOSALS.

Have the Central Powers expressed a desire for peace?

Yes, frequently informally and twice or more formally.

On what terms?

On terms recognizing them as victorious, as they have seemed to be. Of late they have asked less but still not offered to surrender.

Have the Allies given much consideration to these proposals?

Very little. They demand righting of wrongs done and guarantees for the future.

Why have we hopes of getting better terms later?

Because we believe that our enemies can not long find more men as soldiers and equip them and feed their peoples.

Is there any other reason for not accepting peace?

Yes; to do so now would be to give German militarism dominion over the world and we will fight to the last to prevent this.

What is the greatest present hope of winning?

The entrance of the United States into the war.

How much strength does this add?

That of the richest and one of the largest countries of the world.

What man power do we add?

Nearly as much as Germany and Austria both had at the beginning.

What other great advantage do we have?

Our wealth and man power have not been exhausted already; our strength is fresh.

What appeals for peace has Pope Benedict XV made?

One in August, 1915, without definite proposals.

One in August, 1917, recommending that:

1. Moral force of right replace power of arms.
2. The seas be free in every sense.
3. That no indemnities whatever be required.
4. That all occupied territories be returned.
5. That many questions as to certain peoples and territories be discussed after the war.

What was President Wilson's reply?

That the proposed peace would merely give German autocracy time to regain strength. That the intolerable wrongs of furious and brutal power of the German government must be righted. That we cannot take the word of the present rulers of Germany.

What was the German reply?

That the Kaiser always had tried to keep peace. The substitution of moral power of right for force of arms is a fine idea and Germany will support any proposal compatible with the vital interest of the German Empire and people. Nothing was said about return of territory, etc.

RELIGIONS, RACES, ETC., IN THE WAR.

Is this war one between different religions?

No; not in any sense.

Who are fighting together?

Protestant and Roman Catholic Germans, Greek Catholic Bulgarians, Mohammedan Turks on one side; Roman Catholic Irish, French, Italians, with Protestant English and Americans, Brahmin Hindoos and Buddhist Japs on the other, etc., etc.

How are the Protestants divided?

German Protestants on one side and English, American, etc., on the other.

How are Roman Catholics divided?

Irish, French, Italian, English, American, etc., on one side; German, Austrian, Bohemian, etc., on the other.

How are the Greek Catholics divided?

Bulgarians on one side and Russians and Greeks on the other.

How are the Mohammedans divided?

Turks on one side, Arabs rebelling, many from Africa and India on the other side.

Is this a war of races?

Not to any great extent.

Are the Germanic races together?

England and Germany are the bitterest foes.

Are the Slavs together?

Bulgarians and a large part of the Austrian army are Slavs against Russian, Serbian and other Slavs.

Are the Poles together?

Many are in the German and Austrian armies and many in the Russian.

How was race related to the beginning of the war?

We should remember that it was Austrian fear of Pan-Slavism that led her to attack Serbia.

What does Pan-Slavism mean?

The plan of joining all the Slavs under one government.

Between what, then, is the war?

Between two groups of nations as such; it is the War of the Nations.

Several years ago a writer said, "Some day some one will drop a match somewhere in the Balkans and start a conflagration that will run over Europe." Did he say too much?

No; that conflagration has gone farther than Europe.

Where was the match dropped?

It was the flash of the assassin's pistol in Bosnia.

ALLIED WAR AIMS.

Do we know on what terms this country and our allies are willing to make peace?

Yes, quite exactly; for within the first ten days of January, 1918, the heads of the British and American governments told us.

Who is the head of the English government?

David Lloyd George, the premier or prime minister.

When did he speak?

January 5.

What right has he to speak?

He tells us that he had consulted with representatives of the principal parts of the British empire and of English classes.

Who is the head of the American government?

President Woodrow Wilson.

When did he speak?

January 8, to Congress.

Is it likely that these men would propose anything France and Italy do not approve?

No; for they probably know much of the opinions of these allies also.

What kind of treaties of peace are demanded?

Open treaties, without any secret understanding of any kind between or among certain nations.

Why?

President Wilson says that such secret understandings are "likely at some unlooked for moment to upset the peace of the world."

Have such treaties heretofore been common?

Yes.

Have they ever upset the peace of the world?

It is probable that uncertainties on account of secret treaties had considerable to do with the present war.

What of freedom of the seas?

President Wilson demands "absolute freedom of navigation," alike in peace and war. Premier Lloyd George says nothing on this point.

DEMANDS ON GERMANY AND AUSTRIA.

Do the Allies demand the destruction of the German nation?

No.

What does Lloyd George say about this?

"The destruction or disruption of Germany or of the German people has never been a war aim with us."

What does Mr. Wilson say?

"We have no jealousy of German greatness and there is nothing in our program that impairs it."

Do they demand that Germany adopt a democratic form of government?

No; Lloyd George says that would be good but that it is a question for the German people.

What place are we willing to give her?

"We wish her only to accept a place of equality among the nations of the world, instead of a place of mastery."—Wilson.

What do the Allies, then, require Germany to give up?

The scheme of ruling other countries by force of arms.

What do they require her to acknowledge?

"The right of all peoples to live on equal terms of liberty and safety with each other, whether they be strong or weak."

Of what deception does Lloyd George accuse the German leaders?

Of falsely teaching the German people that they are fighting a war of self-defense against nations bent on the destruction of Germany.

Do the Allies demand that Austria-Hungary be broken up?

Lloyd George says, "We agree with President Wilson that the break-up of Austria-Hungary is no part of our war aims."

What do they say should be done?

That genuine self-government on true democratic principles should be granted to the Austro-Hungarian peoples, who have long desired it.

DEMANDS ON TURKEY.

Do they expect to require Turkey to give up Constantinople?

Neither that capital nor any other territory whose inhabitants are principally of the Turkish race.

What portions of the present Ottoman empire do they demand shall be given "an undoubted security of life and an absolutely unmolested opportunity of autonomous development"?

Arabia, Armenia, Mesopotamia, Syria and Palestine.

Does this mean that these divisions would be made independent sovereign states?

Lloyd George says that would be impossible.

What would probably be done?

It is likely that each would be given entire local self-government, under the nominal sovereignty of Turkey, but guaranteed by all the nations against oppression.

What would this mean for Arabia?

That the Arabs would again be practically free in their own country.

Have the Arabs been faithful subjects of Turkey?

No; they have never fully submitted to that government.

What would such a peace mean for Armenia and Syria?

Freedom from persecutions and massacres from which they have suffered for centuries.

What would it mean for Palestine?

Perhaps that it would be placed practically under the management of the Jews, whose home-land it is, and that both they and Christians could travel safely to all its holy places.

What would such a peace mean for Mesopotamia?

That, probably under the supervision of England, its fertility might be restored by irrigation and good farming and it become once more one of the richest countries of the world instead of the near desert it is now.

What will be demanded as to the straits from the Mediterranean to the Black sea?

That they be internationalized and neutralized.

What does being internationalized mean?

Their being open to the use of all nations on equal terms.

What would it mean to have them neutralized?

That no war should be permitted along their course.

Are they now prepared for war?

So strongly that the English and French made no progress in attacking them directly.

How are they prepared?

By great fortifications planned years ago by German military engineers and defended by German-made guns.

DEMANDS FOR WEAK PEOPLES.

What of Alsace-Lorraine?

It must be given back to France.

How do both Lloyd George and Wilson speak of its seizure by Germany?

As "the great wrong done to France by Prussia in 1871."

What does President Wilson say of this wrong?

"It has unsettled the peace of the world for nearly fifty years."

What does Mr. Lloyd George say of it?

"This sore has poisoned the peace of Europe for half a century."

How strongly determined are the Allies on this demand?

Lloyd George says, "We mean to stand by France to the death."

What is demanded for Belgium?

That it be restored completely to independence and all the injury done to her repaired, so far as may be.

What of the occupied parts of France and Italy?

They also must be vacated and restored.

What of Serbia, Montenegro and Roumania?

They must likewise be cleared of alien armies and damages made good.

Are any indemnities to be demanded?

No; each nation will itself bear the cost of its war expenses.

Will money paid by Germany to make good damages done be an indemnity?

No; for it will not pay any part of the expenses of any nation for going to war.

For what, then, will England, France, Italy, the United States, etc., if victorious, still pay the enormous costs of the war?

For the benefits coming with the making of the world safe.

What is demanded for Italy?

"Union of Italians with those of their own race and tongue." "readjustment of Italy's frontiers along clearly recognizable lines of nationality."

What does this mean practically?

That the districts of Austria inhabited by Italians shall be given to Italy.

What is demanded for Poland?

A really independent nation made up of all Polish elements who desire to be included, its complete independence and security to be guaranteed by international covenant.

Has a Polish state already been established?

Yes; Germany has made a new kingdom of Poland; but we consider this nothing more than a German scheme to hold it as a dependency.

What is proposed for Roumania?

That those of Roumanian blood and speech be given justice.

What does this probably mean?

That those sections of Hungary (Transylvania) inhabited by Roumanians be joined to Roumania.

What is especially asked for Serbia?

Free and secure access to the sea, this country now having no seaport.

What of Germany's colonies?

An adjustment is demanded that considers the interests of the populations concerned.

Where did Germany have colonies?

In Africa, New Guinea, Samoa, etc.

Who now hold them?

English, Portuguese and Japanese forces.

Do the Allies demand anything for Russia?

The two speeches differ somewhat in this.

What was Lloyd George's attitude?

He recognized that Russia brought others into the war by stepping in to protect Serbia; that the present rulers were engaged in negotiating a separate peace without any reference to the nations she brought in; he warned them that such a peace would merely enslave Russia to Germany; he concluded that Russia could be saved only by her own people.

How does President Wilson regard the situation?

He hears the voice of the helpless Russian people; he demands the evacuation of all Russian territory and a chance for real freedom as a democratic nation; he urges other nations to consider Russia's needs.

SECURITIES FOR THE FUTURE.

What guaranties that this awful catastrophe shall not be repeated are demanded?

The reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with domestic safety and the establishment of an international organization to settle international disputes.

What disadvantages of the present system of settling international disputes does Lloyd George refer to?

"The burden of war," "the crushing weight of modern armaments," "the evil of compulsory military service," "the vast waste of wealth and effort," "blots on our civilization of which every thinking individual must be ashamed."

Finally, what is necessary to make any treaty of peace "worth the paper it is written on"?

The determination of every nation, "at whatever sacrifices, to honor the national signature"; that is, to keep its treaty promises.

What does Lloyd George say is necessary to give some promise of stability of any settlement made?

Government with the consent of the governed.

How far does President Wilson pledge the American people to go to enforce such terms as he has demanded?

He guarantees that we will devote our lives, our honor and everything that we possess to that purpose.

Will we Americans, young and old, do this?

Every citizen in the schools and out of school must answer for himself. What does the reader say?

Why should we sacrifice so much?

"Because we wish the right to prevail and desire a just and stable peace," with all the benefits to the world that this will bring.

In all of these terms, stated by the heads of the British and American governments, is there any selfish advantage asked for America or England?

Nothing that is not to be of equal value to all other peoples of the earth.

Will our victory hurt Germany?

Much less, probably, than their own victory would in the end hurt the German people.

From what insanity will defeat free them?

From that of thinking themselves better than all other peoples.

Should we hate the German people for their injuries to us and the cruelties they have inflicted on others?

No; for hate always does more harm to the hater than to the one hated; but we should punish and cure them.

Which is the only country that has praised hate?

Germany, whose emperor gave a decoration of honor to the author of a "Hymn of Hate."

What does ex-President Taft say seems to be the only way to cure them?

By a surgical operation.

What does he mean by that?

That we must fight them, defeat them, teach them finally that might does not make right, not even Prussian might.

When and where did President Wilson again state American war aims?

July 4, 1918, in a speech at the tomb of Washington at Mt. Vernon.

What four principles did he then state?

1. Arbitrary power that can destroy the peace of the world of its own choice must be destroyed.
2. All decisions of questions of territory, sovereignty, etc., must be based on free acceptance by the peoples immediately concerned.
3. Nations must keep faith, as individuals are expected to do.
4. The organized combined power of the nations must guarantee peace and justice through a definite tribunal to whose decisions all must submit.

In what one sentence did he sum up?

"What we seek is the reign of law based on the consent of the governed and sustained by the organized opinion of mankind."

AMERICAN PREPARATION.

Were we slow in getting armies into the field?

It took England about two years to develop her full fighting strength in the field.

What have we been doing toward putting an army in the field?

We have built great camps, manufactured vast supplies of clothing, ammunition and arms, selected and trained men, built ships and air-ships and have sent more than a million and a half men to France.

How many men do we expect to put in the field?

We have about two million men in arms, expect to have before Jan. 1, 1919, another million and may increase the number to five million.

How fast are men being sent to France?

More than a quarter of a million per month have recently been sent, more than 300,000 in July, 1918, and they are now forming an important part of the fighting forces. General Pershing had in August more than a million men under his direct command.

How great have our casualties been; that is, the number of killed, wounded and missing?

Up to August 3, 1918, General March, chief of staff, stated that the total was between 12,000 and 14,000.

What is a casualty?

The removal of a man from the effective forces by death, capture or wounds of any character, either serious or slight.

How great have the German casualties been?

They have been estimated at six million, more than a million and a half being deaths. Ordinarily, not more than a fifth of the casualties are deaths.

What did the United States do in the first year and a quarter of war?

We increased the army from 212,000 to more than 2,000,000; the navy from 150,000 to 500,000; we built 32 camps and cantonments for 47,000 or more men each; also, several training fields for aviators, many manufacturing of powder, arms, etc.; built, 600 miles of railroad and many other great works in France; greatly increased shipping and airplane production; put 360 woolen mills at work on army contracts, bought 20 million pairs of shoes, etc., etc.

ARMY ORGANIZATION BY DRAFT.

How did the United States change the organization of its army for this war?

From a volunteer organization to one made up by a selective draft.

What is a draft?

A drawing by impartial lot of certain men.

When is a draft made selective?

When those fairly drawn are accepted or rejected and assigned to the service they can do best, all according to their fitness.

What was the first step toward a draft?

A registration or listing of men.

Who were registered?

All men of from twenty-one to thirty-one years of age, nearly ten million of them, all of these being numbered in their registration districts.

What was the next step?

The drawing by lot to see what numbers should first be called.

What is the next step taken?

The determination of an exemption board as to which ones should be taken and which ones excused.

What kind of men are excused?

Those who are not sound in mind, body or health and those who are believed to be able to help more to win the war in some other work than in that of a soldier.

What are some of the kinds of work that excuse a young man from army service?

For example, the making of ammunition or arms or machinery or food-producing work that cannot be done by others.

What else may excuse a young man?

The fact of having wife or children or parents or others who have no other sufficient means of support than his work.

Who, at present, are to be chosen first?

Healthy, unmarried men who have no dependents.

What change in the draft law was enacted by Congress in August, 1918?

The extension of the age limits from the 18th to the 46th birthday, different ages to be called in any order the President may determine.

What provision has the government made for the protection of families of enlisted men?

The issuing of life insurance not exceeding $10,000 per man, amounting in August, 1918, to over 30 billion dollars of insurance applied for by about 3,400,000 men.

What does the Red Cross do for these families?

One of its departments provides for the furnishing of competent advice concerning business matters, free of charge.

SPENDING OF MONEY.

What else are the people providing in addition to the young men?

Money, more money than our government has ever spent in all of its history before.

For what first is the government spending money?

To build great camps for housing and training soldiers; for tents, arms, ammunition, trucks, wagons, horses, ships to replace those lost; and more for clothing, food, medical service, etc.

For what other purpose have we furnished money?

To lend to allied countries which have already spent many billions and so are poorer than we are.

What are they doing with this money?

Buying materials with which to continue the war as we are beginning to do.

Where are they buying these things?

Wherever they may be found,—a very large portion of them in this country.

Why are not these supplies bought at home?

Because these greatly war-worn countries are not able to produce them.

How great have our exports become?

They have risen to the value of about six billion dollars per year.

SOME DUTIES OF CITIZENS

How can this country furnish all we need and all our allies need too?

Only by raising and manufacturing a great deal more than we use.

What, then, is the first duty of every good citizen who does not go to war, no matter what his age?

To do his work faithfully and try to find some way in which he may help to produce more.

What special classes have been called on for special service?

Doctors and nurses for service in hospitals; doctors to examine registered men; dentists to care for the teeth of enlisted men; lawyers to help them in making out questionnaires; teachers in helping exemption boards to index these; mechanics for work in shipyards, munition and airplane factories, etc.

How can pupils in school do most?

By being better students than ever before, and learning faster and learning more.

How will being better students help to win the war?

The war is taking a great many trained young men; more will be needed; pupils now in school must grow up trained to take their places.

How else may school children help the country?

By helping more with the work at home and looking for chances to help elsewhere.

In what particular ways?

By employing hours, days or months outside of school in raising gardens or helping to farm or to make something that can be used, doing any work that needs to be done.

FOOD PROBLEMS.

What, especially, can school children do to produce food?

By finding each year a bit of good ground, planning, learning how to plant, getting ready to start at the right time in the spring.

How can we learn what, when and how to plant and how to cultivate?

By getting garden seed catalogues or books on gardening from dealers, libraries, etc., talking with parents, gardeners, farmers, etc.

Have the people responded to the call to gardening?

Greatly in 1917 and very much more in 1918.

After helping all we can to produce, how can we help further to increase the amount we can let our allies have?

Only by using no more than we really need and letting nothing go to waste.

What else will help?

To select for our own use, as far as we can, things that can not be sent to war easily.

Why does it help to eat corn bread, rabbits, poultry, etc., rather than wheat bread, beef, and pork?

Wheat, beef and pork can be shipped to France without spoiling and can be used there; the other foods can not be shipped and used so well.

What other foods than those mentioned should we use sparingly?

Sugar and fats, such as lard and butter.

What is being planned to insure plenty in 1919?

Every farmer is asked to raise a field of wheat and to increase the number of hogs.

Even when we have large crops should we use food freely?

No; we must build up reserve stores for ourselves and allies for fear of a poor crop next year.

What else has been done by the government to help furnish enough food for all?

A food commission has been appointed to control all food production and use.

What does this commission have power to do?

To regulate all trade in foods, to prevent hoarding, to require reports, to control wholesale prices and limit the amounts of different foods the people may purchase, so far as it seems necessary to do so.

What changes in the manufacture of liquors have been made to save food?

That of distilled liquors has been stopped and that of malt liquors greatly reduced.

Has this been done by the United States alone?

No; nearly all countries have made similar regulations as a war measure.

Would such a means of saving be good in times of peace as well as in war?

This question is being seriously considered.

How much food does Mr. Hoover, head of the food administration, expect us to be able to export this year?

The United States 18 million tons and Canada 3 million.

Are the enemy countries hungry?

Mr. Hoover says they are and that in the conquered countries the loss of life by starvation will exceed all casualties on the western front in battle.

How many are these casualties?

From March 21 to July 24, it is estimated that a million have been killed, captured or wounded.

How great are our principal products annually?

Wheat 900 million bushels; corn, 3 billion; oats 1½ billion; rye, 82 millions; potatoes, 406 millions; coal, 600 million tons; hay, 102 million tons; cotton, 11 to 15 million bales; copper, 2 billion pounds; petroleum, 15 billion gallons.

FUEL PROBLEMS.

What has been done to secure enough coal for use where it is needed?

A United States fuel commission has been appointed to control fuel in the country.

What has this commission done?

First, it set prices for different kinds of coal in different parts of the country. Then, January, 1918, factories, etc., all over the country were ordered not to use fuel for five days and these and ordinary business establishments, offices, etc., not to use fuel on ten Mondays.

Why?

To get enough to furnish ships, engines, etc., to forward goods, to supply houses, schools, etc.

Did this order of Commissioner Garfield please all members of Congress?

It was severely criticised in Congress; it seemed necessary for a time but was afterward discontinued when mild weather came.

Why should certain officers have power to give orders that even Congress does not approve of at the time?

We believe, just as the ancient Romans did, that in times of war emergency, the best results can be obtained by creating dictators.

What were all urged to do in the spring and summer of 1918?

To store coal early for the next winter, not to burden the market then.

Should we still save coal?

Yes; as it is still difficult to get enough mined and shipped for factories, trains, ships, and homes.

Is there not enough coal in the earth?

Yes; perhaps enough to last for five hundred years or more.

Can it not be dug fast enough?

The miners' officers say that it would be easy to dig all we could use.

Why, then, is it so hard to get?

Because we have not enough railroad engines and cars to haul it.

What, then, should we do to help?

Every one who has anything to do with loading or unloading a car should do it as quickly as possible so that it may go on to haul more.

What else should we be careful to do?

To use coal mined as near as possible, as this requires less time of the cars for hauling; and so, of other things we use, to get those produced nearest home.

RAILROAD CONTROL, ETC.

What did the United States government do to help quick shipments, at the end of December, 1917?

It took charge of all the railroads in the country.

How does this help?

Cars are sent by the shortest ways instead of being sent farther to keep them on one company's line; rules can be made better for the shipment first of the things most needed; two trains will not be run on parallel roads when one can do all the business just as well; great expenses of advertising to get business for certain roads can be saved, etc.

Was it fair to the people who own the railroads to take them?

Yes; the government has agreed to pay the people who own the roads as much as they have been getting per year during the past three years; also to return the property after the war in as good condition as received.

Of what other public utilities did the U. S. government take control August 1, 1918?

Of all the telegraph and telephone lines of the country.

What good will come with all of the evils of war to us?

We shall be trained to work better, to think more, to avoid waste and to save.

Have we been careless in these matters?

We have probably been less saving and more wasteful than the people of any other country.

Why?

Because America is a new country and it has been easy to raise more than we needed.

Is this still true?

It is much less true than it formerly was.

Why?

Because all of our best lands have been taken and the population is still increasing.

What has proved it?

Even before the war the cost of all living was increasing greatly.

What is the only remedy for this trouble?

To cultivate the land more carefully, work more, waste less of food, spend less for useless things.

AGENCIES HELPING THE GOVERNMENT

What is the Red Cross Society?

An organization formed to work through the world especially to bring relief and comforts to those suffering or in danger from war or other calamities.

What is this organization doing for the present needs?

It is preparing clothing by sewing and knitting, making surgical dressings and providing many other supplies for our soldiers and others affected by the war.

Who, especially, are doing this work?

Women and girls, with materials provided by donations and membership fees.

Suppose these workers do not earn as much as ordinary wages; is this a waste?

No; it is still a gain to the country and helps to win the war, if done in time that would otherwise not have been employed to produce something else still more valuable.

Should every woman knit?

Yes, if the soldiers can still use knit goods, her health and eyesight will permit and she would not be taking time from some more valuable work.

What is the Council of National Defense?

A government agency with branches in every state and community to do all it can to plan bringing the industries and resources of the country to work together for the national security and welfare.

What is the Committee on Public Information?

A governmental agency to choose and issue news daily, to provide Four-Minute Men as speakers, pictures, motion picture service, educational pamphlets (Red, White and Blue series,) and other forms of reliable war information. Address this committee at Washington for literature.

What is the National Security League?

A private, non-political, non-partisan organization to promote patriotic education and universal military training and service. It has issued pamphlets and leaflets of war information. Address 19 W. Forty-fourth street, N. Y.

What is the Boys' Working Reserve?

An organization promoted by the U. S. government for boys from sixteen to twenty-one years of age designed to help them find places where their work is needed.

How is this done?

By registering all boys, with information as to the kind of work they can do.

How are the records kept?

By cards indexed so that they can be found quickly.

How are these used?

When work of certain kinds is needed, those in charge of the records are asked where to find the boys to do this work.

What are the Young Mens' Christian Association and the Knights of Columbus?

Originally religious and fraternal organizations of the Evangelical and Roman Catholic churches respectively, but both devoted to the war service of providing in camps somewhat homelike surroundings, wholesome amusements and good moral and religious influences for soldiers.

What is the National Board for Historical Service?

A committee of trained historians or students of history whose work is that of securing, preserving and using true historical accounts of the events of the present times.

U. S. GOVERNMENT INVESTMENTS AND TAXES

How has the government provided for raising the money to run the war?

By increasing taxation and by selling bonds.

What two kinds of taxation does the government use?

Direct and indirect taxation.

What direct tax is levied by the U. S. government?

An income tax.

How is this arranged?

For no tax to be paid by those who have only a little, a small tax by single men getting more than $1000 or a family having more than $2000 income a year and more from those who have more.

How much is taken from those who have very large incomes?

Nearly one-half from those who have $1,000,000 per year, more than one-half from those who have $2,000,000, about three-fifths from those who have $3,000,000, and so on.

What indirect taxes are common?

Increased letter postage, war taxes added to the cost of railway fares, theatre tickets, etc.

How great is the annual income of the United States now?

More than two billion dollars, not counting loans.

What are government bonds?

Promises of the government to pay the holder, after a number of years, the money borrowed and to pay interest in the mean time.

How much has the government borrowed already by selling bonds?

About $11,000,000,000 in three loans, or issues; and a fourth loan of $6,000,000 in September and October, 1918.

How did the people respond to the appeal for loans?

They subscribed 36% more than was asked.

Why are these called "Liberty Bonds"?

Because this war is being fought to keep us and other nations from losing our liberty.

How may we lose our liberty, if Germany wins?

If Germany should win, we should all have to work for her.

In what way?

We should have to pay great sums of money, as France once did, as a war indemnity to pay for Germany's expense in defeating us.

How else would we be slaves, if Germany won decisively?

We should have to agree to trade regulations for Germany's benefit or keep up a great army as France has had to keep one.

What is the smallest Liberty bond?

One for fifty dollars.

What interest do Liberty bonds draw?

First liberty loan bonds $3\frac{1}{2}\%$, Second Liberty loan bonds 4% and third Liberty Loan bonds $4\frac{1}{4}\%$.

Can any bonds be changed to a higher interest bearing bond?

Yes, First and Second Liberty bonds may be changed to $4\frac{1}{4}\%$ bonds retaining the same dates as the original bonds.

When may this be done?

Any time within six months from date of original bond.

Are Liberty bonds subject to taxes?

Liberty bonds are not subject to general taxes. First Liberty bonds are subject to inheritance tax only, while Second and Third Liberty bonds are subject to inheritance and federal income taxes only.

Does our government make loans to our allies?

Yes. To Aug. 30, 1918 we have loaned our allies about seven billions of dollars, 3725 millions to Great Britain; 2065 millions to France; 760 millions to Italy; 188 millions to Russia; 154 millions to Belgium; 12 millions to Serbia; 15 millions to Cuba; 16 millions to Greece.

How does the Government raise money before taxes are paid and before the bonds are paid for?

By issuing U. S. Treasury Certificates of Indebtedness, which are in reality short time government notes.

Who may buy U. S. Treasury Certificates?

Any bank, corporation or individual.

How much money is there in circulation in the United States?

On July 1, 1918, there was 5385 million dollars.

What plan is offered for people who cannot spare fifty dollars?

The purchasing of Thrift stamps and War Savings certificates, twenty-five cents worth or more at a time.

Do pupils know how to do this?

Yes; for each has had a circular explaining it.

What else were all asked to do with this circular?

To take it home to parents.

Why is this savings plan a double benefit?

It helps the country and helps each person who buys to get the habit of saving.

Do we give away money when we buy Liberty Bonds or War Certificates?

No; this is an investment; they are worth the money paid and pay the holder interest.

WAR GIFTS AND SERVICE

In what ways do we really give away money to help win the war?

We once sent Christmas presents to war orphans; we give for saving starving children in Armenia, Belgium or elsewhere; we give to the Red Cross society; we give to the Young Men's Christian Association or the Knights of Columbus, to the Anti-Tuberculosis society, for presents to soldiers, etc.

Which is better, saving or giving?

We become rich in money by saving; but we become rich in soul by giving wisely to good causes.

In what way do we help in the work against tuberculosis?

Both by direct gifts or membership fees and by buying and using at the holiday season Christmas seals.

Why is this work especially needed at this time?

Because it has been found that unhealthful camp, trench and field conditions incident to war have much increased the danger of this disease.

What must each good American do to help win this war?

The particular thing he is able to do.

Should we learn and sing patriotic songs?

Yes; but it helps still more to buy Christmas seals.

Should we be careful to uncover when the flag passes?

We certainly should; but it is more important to help the Y. M. C. A.

Should we put a Red Cross emblem in the window?

We should; but the important part is giving and working for the Red Cross.

Should we display service flags where we may?

Yes; but it is more important to render service by producing food.

Should we feel sorry for the starving people of the world?

Yes; but the way to show it is by relieving them and being careful not to waste food.

Is it a good thing to wear a flag on the breast?

Yes, it is a reminder of our love of country; but it does still more good to invest our savings in War Savings certificates and Liberty bonds.

Should we applaud patriotic speeches?

Yes; but we prove our patriotism better by paying our taxes without grumbling.

Is it good to place a flag in the window?

Yes; but we serve the country more by saving coal.

Should we put flags in school-rooms and on top of the house?

Yes, it is an excellent part of education to honor the flag thus; but it is more patriotic to do the school work well that we may be the better prepared to do the work of citizens.

Should we read and study the history of this country and of the present war?

Certainly; but it is much more important to put into practice what we learn and help make American history by all these kinds of service.

When doing all these things we may to help win the war what should we think of?

Of how much less a service we are rendering in giving our time, our work, our money, than that of the boys who are offering their lives on the field of battle.

After the war, what?

After the victory we must win, in times of peace there will be need of all our best training, thought and work to build up again and advance our beloved country.

PROMINENT LEADERS

In the course of this war, who have been the most influential leaders in the different countries?

In the United States, President Wilson, General Pershing, Herbert Hoover, Charles Schwab, etc.

In Great Britain, Lord Kitchener, Herbert Asquith, premier to Dec. 6, 1916; David Lloyd George, premier since; General John French (Viscount French of Ypres); General Douglas Haig.

In France, General Joffre, the hero of the early period, General Petain General Foch, now generalissimo in command of all the forces of all the Allies.

In Italy, General Cadorna and General Diaz.

In Greece, Premier Venizelos.

In Russia, Grand Duke Nicholas, Kerensky, Trotzky, Lenine.

In Germany, Generals Hindenburg, Falkenhayn, Ludendorff, Mackensen, premiers, Bethmann-Hollweg and Hertling, etc.

In Austria, no characters have shown themselves very strong, because the position of Austria has been secondary.

In Turkey, Enver Pasha and Talaat Bey.

MILITARY RANKS AND ORGANIZATIONS.

Beginning with the lowest rank, what are the titles of commissioned officers in the army?

Second lieutenant, first lieutenant, captain, major, lieutenant colonel, colonel, brigadier general, major general, lieutenant general, general.

What are corporals and sergeants?

Non-commissioned officers in a company.

Beginning with the smallest, what are the administrative units in the army, with the proper commander of each and its usual size?

Company, captain, 75 to 250 men; battalion, major, two to four companies; regiment, colonel, 1591 to 3755 men; brigade, brigadier general, 2 regiments; division, major general, 2 brigades; corps, lieutenant general, 2 to 6 divisions; army, a ranking general, 2 or more corps.

FOREIGN MONEY

Country	Name of Unit	Value
Great Britain	pound sterling, £	$4.87
France	franc, fr	.20
Italy	lire	.20
Germany	mark	.24
Russia	rouble	.51
Austria-Hungary	crown	.20

MEASURE OF DISTANCE

The common measure of distance all through Europe is the kilometer, approximately three-fifths of a mile. Therefore, when distance is quoted in kilometers, divide by 5 and multiply by 3 to get an idea of the distance in miles.

(From "The Round Table" published by the Macmillan Co., a map used in the special war edition of "The School," Toronto, Ontario.)

What does the map above show?

The remarkable mixture of races in the Balkan peninsula.

Do other parts of Europe show such mixtures?

Yes; though more nationalities are crowded together here than elsewhere.

If every race were made independent what would be the effect on the present states?

It would change their boundaries greatly.

Could each nationality be made into a state?

Not conveniently, for "islands" of one nationality are often entirely surrounded by others, and different races are more or less mixed in the same territory.

Where are these relations of races, languages and governments well treated?

In Benezet's, "Story of the Map of Europe" Scott, Foresman & Company

1. Teutonic	 German Dutch Flemish Scandinavian
2. Latin	 French, Walloons & Spanish Italian Rumanian
3. Slavonic	 a. Northern Slavs  Russians Poles Ruthenes Czechs & Slovaks  b. Southern Slavs  Slovenes Croats & Serbs Bulgars
4. Letts & Lithuanians
5. Ural-Altaic stock	 Turks Magyars
6. Greeks
7. Albanians
National Boundaries		Racial Boundaries

(From "The Round Table," published by the Macmillan Co., this plate being used also in "The School" of Toronto.)

What is the purpose of the plate above?

To explain the map on the opposite page.

What would be the effect on different states, if each nationality were made independent?

It will be a good exercise to trace some of these changes on the map.

NOTES:—1. This pamphlet is published on the basis of no profit, as war service.

2. Of the early editions, 56,000 were printed and circulated. If a corresponding demand continue, revisions will be made from time to time to keep the information, as nearly as may be, up to date.

3. Users of the pamphlet should note the progress of events and add or change items accordingly.

PRONUNCIATION OF NAMES

(Interpret respelling according to usual sounds in English).

NAMES OF RIVERS

Adige, ah'-dee-jay	Oise, wahz
Aisne, ain	Piave, pee-ah'-vay
Ancre, onk'-r	Saone, sone
Drave, drahv	Seine, sane
Eure, err	Somme, some
Isonzo, ee'-zone-zo	Tagliamento, taal-yah-men'-toe
Loire, lwar	Ticino, tee-chee'-no
Lys, lease	Vesle, vale
Marne, marne	Yser, ee'-zr
Meuse, muz

NAMES OF TOWNS

Albert, aal-baer'	Lens, long
Amiens, ah-myong	Lille, leel
Armentieres, are-mong-tee-air'	Liege, lee-ayzh'
Arras, are-rah'	Longwy, long-vee'
Aubigny, o-bean-yeer'	Loos, loce
Bailleul, bah-yule'	Louvain, loo-veng'
Bapaume, bah-pome'	Luneville, loo-nay-veel'
Beauvais, bo-vay'	Maubeuge, moe-buzh'
Belfort, bel-fore'	Malines, mah-leen'
Bethune, bay-toon'	Messines, mess-seen'
Bixschoote, biks-shote'	Mirecourt, mere-kour'
Briey, bree-aye'	Montdidier, mong-dee-dee-aye'
Bruges, brew'-jiz	Mont, as ending, mong
Bucharest, boo-kah-rest'	Montenegro, Mone' tay-nay' grow
Bulgaria, bool-gay' ri-ah	Namur, nah-moor'
Calais, kal-aye'	Nancy, nong-see'
Cambrai, kong-breh'	Neufchateau, noo-shah-toe'
Charleroi, shar-lu-rwa'	Nieuport, new'-port
Chalons, sha-long'	Noyon, nwa-yong
Chateau-Thierry, shah-toe' tyeh-ree'	Ostende, ose-tend'
Chaulnes, shone	Paris, pah-ree'
Chauny, sho-nee'	Peronne, pay-roan'
Chemin des Dames, shay-mang' day daam'	Petrograd, pyeh-tro-graath'
Compiègne, comb-pyen' yu	Przemysl, pshem' ishly
Conde, kone-day'	Reims, reemz
Coucy, koo-see'	Roulers, roo-lay'
Court, as ending, koor	Saint Mihiel, sang-mee-yel'
Craonne, kray-own'	Saint Amer, sang-o-maer'
Dinant, dee-nong'	Saint Quentin, sang kong-teng'
Dixmude, dee-mood'	Sedan, su-dong'
Dunkerque, dun-kerk'	Serajevo, say-rah-yay' vo
Epernay, aye-purr-nay'	Soissons, swa-song'
Fismes, feem	Tirelemont, tere-lu-mong'
Fresnes, frain	Trieste, tree-es' tay
Ghent, gent	Ukraine, you' krane
Guise, gweez	Valenciennes, vah-long-se-enn'
Hazebrouk, ahz-brook'	Verdun, ver-dung'
Kiaochow, kyow' cho	Verviers, ver-vee-aye'
LaBassée, la-baas-say'	Ypres, ee'-pr
LaFère, la-fair'	Zeebrugge, zay-brug'

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

0 021 547 780 0

1 525

.E 2

LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

0 021 547 780 0